New Labor Legislation
Will Be Bitterly Fought In Congress

WASHINGTON — Important labor legislation to be introduced at the coming Congress already is being discussed in inner Administration councils.

The issue will present some of the knottiest political and industrial problems facing Roosevelt, and will cause some of the bitterest fighting of the session.

That much discussed Section 7a—along with the entire National Industrial Recovery Act—will expire next year unless renewed. Under the stimulus of this collective bargaining guaranty organized labor has experienced one of the greatest revivals in its history.

It is prepared not only to fight to the last ditch for the continuance of the statute, but will seek its extension.

Labor wants the law amended so that company unionism—the device used by employers to counter independent labor organizations—will be legally outlawed.

Senator Bob Wagner's Labor Disputes Bill, which he offered last session, would have done this. The President, however, was not willing to go that far, so the measure, despite powerful labor pressure, was shelved. Instead was enacted the law under which the National Labor Relations Board now functions.

On the other hand, industry is just as determined. It is grimly opposed to any enactment striking at company unions.

More than that, the employers want Section 7a rewritten along two lines: first, inclusion of a provision legalizing company unions; second, exclusion of the majority rule interpretation that the National Labor Board has read into Section 7a.

Between these two hotly embattled groups stands the President.

Both sides will exert every effort to win his backing. It is to avoid such a distressing tug-of-war that White House strategists already have begun formulation of an Administration labor program as a middle-of-the-road plan.

No Politician

There is a young lady clerk in Secretary Henry Wallace's office who knows her New Dealers.

Recently a prominent Washingtonian telephoned that local baseball fans were getting up a testimonial to Babe Ruth on his retirement as an active player. He wanted to call on the Secretary of Agriculture to obtain his signature.

"I'm sorry," the young lady replied, "but it is impossible. The Secretary is too busy today. He is dated up every moment of the time."

"Well, the President is a busy man, and he found time," the caller pleaded.

"That is the difference between the two men," the girl replied, and hung up.

Foreign Influence

Some of the career diplomats are privately worried about the charge that they are more partial to the countries in which they are stationed than to the United States.

This came to a head not long ago when Tod Marriner, counselor of the American Embassy in Paris, was quoted in the French press as saying he understood France better than America.

Now there are reports that John White, amiable counselor of the American Embassy in Berlin, has Nazi sympathies.

Not long ago Douglas Miller, American commercial attaché, drew up a report on Germany's economic condition for the use of Richard Washburn Child, then studying European conditions for

BOY, 13, JUMPING ON TRAIN, KILLED

LEG CUT OFF, SMITH YOUTH SHOCK VICTIM

Thrown Under Wheels as N. & W. Slows Down
Near Freight House

A 13-year-old boy was dead today. He failed in an effort to get a ride on a Norfolk & Western freight train early Thursday evening, was thrown under the cars and lost his left leg near the hip. He died two hours later in Berger hospital of shock and loss of blood.

William David Smith, 220 W. High-st., stepson of L. C. Scott, was playing near the freight house with his brother, Earl, 6, when an eastbound freight train neared them. The train was flashed a slow signal, since a Pennsylvania train was on the S. Court-st cross, and its engineer slowed it. The elder Smith boy leaped for the train but was thrown under the wheels.

DIED IN TWO HOURS

The Albaugh ambulance answered a call to the scene and rushed the injured boy to Berger hospital. The shock and loss of blood were too great, however, the boy expiring shortly after 7 o'clock.

The Norfolk & Western train crew was not aware of the accident until it reached Chillicothe. Deputy Sheriff Robert Armstrong investigated the accident.

The boy was born in this city June 18, 1921, a son of William Smith and Bessie Arledge. His father is deceased.

Besides his mother and stepfather, L. C. Scott, he is survived by a sister, Waneta Smith of Cincinnati; three brothers, Melvin, Donald and Earl; three half-brothers, Junior, Millard and Willard Scott, and a half-sister, Ida May Scott.

FUNERAL MONDAY

The funeral will be Monday at 2:30 p. m. at the Christian Union church with burial in Forest cemetery by M. S. Rinehart.

DR. JEMISON ON CHURCH PROGRAM

Pastor Who Preached Here

Built Talks at 7:30.

Dr. and Mrs. Jemison will be entertained in the home of Mr. and Mrs. C. R. Barnhart, Montclair-ave, while in the city.

Special music for this evening will be furnished by the choir.

The largest audience of the week greeted Dr. Franklin McElfresh and Dr. J. C. Arbuckle, Thursday night. Both speakers delivered timely and much appreciated messages. The music was provided by Dr. Lilly's choir, which received much favorable comment.

Dr. R. O. McClure, of Columbus, and Dr. L. C. Sparks, of Newark, are the speakers for 10:30 Sunday morning.

The general public is invited to the vesper service at 4 p. m. Sunday, when the combined choirs of Washington C. H. will appear in a sacred concert. There will be no charge.

Auto on Fire, Driver Goes to Engine House

You've heard of persons unconsciously riding beside or near a snake for a number of miles, and you've heard of other similar incidents, but C. S. Sanderson, of Columbus, who is working for the highway department near East Ringgold, did an 'original' Friday morning.

He drove his new car practically the entire distance from Columbus to this city while it was afire. The flames started in the rear seat and did much damage.

Obligingly Sanderson drove the machine to the fire department to have the blaze extinguished.

La Follettes Win With New Party

Here are Senator Robert La Follette, left, and his brother Philip rejoicing in Madison, Wis., as they listened to the final precinct returns that indicated their newly formed Progressive Republican party had ridden the national Democratic landslide to victory at the state polls. Senator "Bob" won his battle for re-election easily, though "Phil", running against both Democrats and the G. O. P. regulars for another term as governor, encountered stiffer resistance.

Seven Endorsed as Enumerators

Seven Pickaway-co rural residents were endorsed, Thursday evening, by the Pickaway-co Democratic executive committee as enumerators of an agricultural census. The county's quota is seven.

The names of William H. Hulse, Jackson-twp.; C. O. Smith, Madison-twp.; J. M. Tootle, Monroe-twp.; Jesse Pitt, Muhlenberg-twp.; Wilbur V. Pontius, Pickaway-twp.; William M. Beavers, Scioto-twp., and William Goode, Washington-twp., will be forwarded to Congressman Mell G. Underwood, who will receive the appointment for the men.

Work is expected to start about December 1.

21 SOUGHT JOBS

There were 21 applicants for the enumerator jobs.

Twenty-nine committeemen attended the meeting which was presided over by George G. Adkins, chairman.

Circleville is in district No. 7 of Ohio with headquarters at Chillicothe. According to plans, the Chillicothe district, one of seven in the state, will be comprised of 17 counties.

The state has been divided for purposes of the census without regard to Congressional districts and with concern only to the farm population, size of the farms, and number of census interviews necessary in a given area. Headquarters of the other six districts in Ohio are Lima, Marion, Cleveland, Dayton, Columbus, Zanesville.

Other counties comprising the Chillicothe district and the tentative number of enumerators scheduled for each are: Adams, 10; Athens, 7; Brown, 16; Clermont, 15; Fairfield, 15; Gallia, 10; Highland, 15; Hocking, 5; Jackson, 5; Lawrence, 8; Meigs, 8; Perry, 6; Pike, 5; Ross, 8; Scioto, 7; Vinton, 4.

TO BE TRAINED

Reports of enumerators will be handled through the headquarters in Chillicothe. Special training is being given supervisors in the various areas, it was stated, on a number of the questions which account of the important nature will be asked in the census.

The schedule of questions, about 100 in all, will include information for other departments of the government and for several emergency agencies, among which are AAA, FEPA, and the Federal Farm Loan Board.

The bus was driven by George Frower, Columbus, who was unhurt.

After the accident Hanning complained that he couldn't hear. It was believed he suffered an eardrum injury.

Complete returns show Judge Russell McCurdy, of Portsmouth, ahead of Judge James Thomas, also of the Scioto-co city, by 6,425 votes. McCurdy will serve until Feb. 1, 1939, the end of the term originally held by Judge Mauck, who expired.

Judge Thomas will remain on the bench through next Monday when the present court sits in Portsmouth to complete unfinished business.

WAVERLY, Nov. 9.—Under the watchful eyes of inspectors from the office of the secretary of state in Columbus, the official count of Pike county's vote in Tuesday's election was scheduled to start today.

The inspectors were sent here by Secretary of State George S. Myers following charges of irregularities in the county's balloting Tuesday. Pending the arrival of the inspectors, the ballots were impounded yesterday and locked in a bank vault.

Possibility existed that the entire vote may be recounted in certain precincts of the county.

U. S. BUSINESS READY TO ACT FOR RECOVERY

Sound Plan of Cooperation Being Studied in
"Let's go" Movement

WASHINGTON, Nov. 9.—Organized business is prepared today to say "Let's go" on a sound plan of co-operation with the administration to achieve recovery.

This was strongly indicated by business leaders today as election bitterness waned and all doubt as to the control of the "New Deal" was removed.

The outcome may be the offer by organized industry of a truce similar to that proposed by the American Bankers' association. High administration officials have indicated that such a truce would be welcomed.

FOLLOWS JONES

Within 24 hours after Chairman Jesse H. Jones of the RFC sounded an optimistic note and urged business to "quit holding back," Robert L. Lund of St. Louis, chairman of the national association of manufacturers, said adoption of sound policies would lead to recovery.

In a message to International News Service, Lund said:

"Industry has welcomed the statements in recent weeks from President Roosevelt and other high officials that recovery is to be sought through sound methods of co-operation that will build confidence."

"If this policy is followed by Congress, we shall soon be on our way to recovery. There is an abundance of private credit and purchasing power stored up awaiting the driving force of such a program."

Rudolph S. Hecht, of New Orleans, president of the American Bankers' association, said that "the offer of association officials to co-operate in recovery has no relation to political events one way or the other."

COMMITTEES WORK

The Bankers' association has committees at work co-operating with the administration to promote foreign trade.

DOKE'S JURY IN DEADLOCK

California Jurors Deliberate
Seven Hours, Resume;
Rumors In Air.

WOODLAND, Cal., Nov. 9.—Deadlocked after seven hours of deliberation, the jury deciding the fate of Judson C. Doke, accused of murdering Lamar Hollingshead, clandestine lover of Doke's pretty wife, today resumed consideration of the case.

There were two unofficial reports on the jury. One was to the effect the voting stood seven to five for acquittal of the defendant who killed Hollingshead, college poet, over the "white hibiscus" love of pretty Helen Louise Doke.

The other report was that three or four jurors were holding out for acquittal and refused to listen to arguments advised by the other jurors that Doke should be found guilty of either murder in the first degree with life imprisonment, or second degree murder with a sentence of from five years to life.

Ohio State's Queen

Mary Alma Oppenheim.

Pretty Mary Alma Oppenheim, of Coldwater, O., will reign as queen of the homecoming celebration at Ohio State university, Columbus. Miss Oppenheim was elected to the queenship by the student body from a field of five candidates.

WIFE HYSTERICAL

Mrs. Sproat, who before her marriage was Miss Marjorie Story, was in the front seat with the surgeon and was only slightly injured while Mr. and Mrs. Howard Moore, 141 N. Sugar-st. Chillicothe, riding in the rear seat also suffered minor injuries. All three were taken to Chillicothe by James Mattinson, this city. Mrs. Sproat was reported stricken with grief today.

All four Chillicotheans had been in Columbus. They left Chillicothe about 4 p. m. Thursday to attend a dinner-dance and a party afterward with friends of Mr. and Mrs. Moore. There is a discrepancy concerning the time of the accident.

Mr. Moore told Chillicothe newspapermen the quartet left Columbus about 4 a. m., the wreck happening about an hour later. Sheriff Charles Radcliff was called to the scene about 6:20 a. m.

Dr. Sproat's body was taken to the Albaugh Funeral home where it was claimed this morning by Carey Ware, Chillicothe.

Investigation by the sheriff and Deputy Miller Fissell disclosed that Bush had a light on the rear of his wagon. It is not certain whether Dr. Sproat fell asleep or whether he did not see the light. Mr. Moore said and knew nothing of the back seat and knew nothing of the middle of the road. Sproat's Pontiac 8- Sedan was badly damaged and the straw-wagon was demolished. A team drawing the wagon was only slightly hurt while Bush escaped injury with the exception of a few bruises. The straw-wagon was one of three under contract with the Container Corporation of America's plant here. The others were driven by Mack Tigner and Andy Benson-haver, both of Logan-st.

Dr. C. E. Bowers, coroner, was called to the Albaugh funeral home to view the body. He pronounced death accidental.

Dr. Sproat was a member of a pioneer Ross-co family. He attended a military school before obtaining degrees at Ohio State university and the University of Michigan. He had served as a surgeon for the Union Pacific railroad on the west coast, and later, desiring to be near his home town, was transferred to Pontiac, Mich., where he practiced for a while. Several years ago he removed to Chillicothe where he became known as a master surgeon. He was a member of the American College of Surgeons.

LEAVES TWO CHILDREN

Surviving are his widow, Mrs. Marjorie Story Sproat; two children, Marjorie, 14, and Ben, 11; a brother, Malcolm, and a sister, Annette of Chillicothe, and another sister, Mrs. Jack Chapman, of Appleton, Maine.

Soprano and Baritone to Feature Combined Choir

When the united choirs of the four main Protestant churches of Washington C. H. come to Circleville for a vesper concert of sacred songs at the M. E. church, Sunday afternoon at four o'clock, Mrs. Lois H. Maurer, who possesses a high soprano voice of unusual sweetness, and M. C. Myers, rich baritone, will take the solo parts.

Miss Marian Christopher, assistant organist of Grace M. E. Church, of Washington C. H., will be the accompanist, and the two pianists will represent the First Baptist and Christian Church of that city. The pianists are Miss Elizabeth Godfrey and Miss Mildred Steffy.

Mr. Ralph Lloyd, director, was in this city a day or two ago making arrangements to accommodate the large chorus, which will probably stand throughout both groups of songs.

Ministers of the other churches and congregations of all churches not having services at four o'clock have been invited to participate in the services.

The concert to be given here is the same as presented in Washington C. H. to a capacity audience last Sunday night, under auspices of the Cecilian Music Club, which sponsors the big chorus.

Explanations The Vogue

EVERYBODY'S business just now seems to be adopting resolutions, disseminating information and writing to the newspapers in defense of one's particular vocation or avocation. The number of "defensive movements" would indicate a saturnalia of fault-finding from which few, if any, occupations or professions are escaping.

The "big butter and egg men from the West" were the first to revolt. By solemn resolution they publicly disclaimed credit for buying diamonds, automobiles and fur coats New York chorus girls are reputed to possess.

Then the models who "shoe-off" the gowns in Fifth avenue shops organized to prove the fallacy of the universal belief that clothing models are jazz mad gold-diggers, whose chief aim in life is marrying a millionaire.

Even politicians have been telling the constituency which "must be served," that they are not politicians at all, but high-minded, self-sacrificing statesmen consecrating their lives to the public service.

One by one the old, time-honored illusions are being shattered. But this should not be cause for concern for an illusion-loving nation. The imagination of the few and the credulity of the many are cooperating in the manufacture of new illusions faster than the iconoclasts and unjustly accused can shatter old ones.

But sometimes you think it your integrity when it is only your vanity.

CAROLINE by RUTH DEWEY GROVES

SYNOPSIS

The depression did not alter life at "Hawthorn," the comfortable, hospitable home of the Philip Rutledges. Caroline, their lovely daughter, entertained lavishly and the younger set swarmed there. Mrs. Rutledge spends most of her time abroad and her husband practically lives at the club. Following her mother's return from one of her trips, Caroline gives a party. The pampered Alva notes how capably her daughter has arranged everything and wishes she could feel happy about it. Caroline's parents disapprove of their daughter's fiancé, Howard Dunsworth. Years ago, Howard's father bought property from Philip saying he wanted it for a leather factory and instead he went into the soap business in competition with Philip. The families have been enemies ever since. At the height of the party, Philip arrives home with the news that Henry Dunsworth has ruined him. Howard seems genuinely shocked. Discussing the effect of the distressing news, Howard tells Caroline: "If we marry, my father will cut me off and if I know you, you wouldn't please you any more, but you think of me?" Caroline flashes back. "Well, you are wrong. I'd have been happy with you anywhere before you said that." With a scornful gesture, she hands him his engagement ring.

CHAPTER IV

Caroline sat in a heap on the sofa, too miserable and bewildered to go back to her mother and father, fighting off tears, thinking of the fault-finding from which few, if any, occupations or professions are escaping.

The "big butter and egg men from the West" were the first to revolt. By solemn resolution they publicly disclaimed credit for buying diamonds, automobiles and fur coats New York chorus girls are reputed to possess.

knowledge. They simply couldn't be so badly off, she thought, that they needed to go about kissing each other!

"Do stop sniffing," she begged. "Are we to appear before the servants as ruins?"

Caroline fled. A bath, her love, a dinner gown. They might help. One needed something.

Dinner was as usual at Hawthorn House that night. Fat wax candles dripped lazily in the old silver candelabra on the lace-covered mahogany table. Crystal glasses sparkled as brightly as ever, the food was as good, the service not quite so perfect as Alva had hitherto required, but perfect enough to escape the notice of the three who sat at the board in a temporary truce with trouble.

The dinner went back to the kitchen barely touched. The cook eyed it in understanding silence but the waitress declared it was a shame the way they neglected good victuals, especially that delicious lobster mousse cook had been at such pains to make for them.

"I guess they got their troubles," the cook remarked.

"Sure, but you'd never know it to listen to 'em. They ain't talking quite the same as usual but they ain't said a word about money since they sat down to the table."

"Where're they having their coffee?"

"In the drawing room same as always. Just as though nothing had happened."

"Well, keep your ears open. Maybe they'll talk freer in there and we can find out what's going to happen to us."

The girl gained nothing to report. Mrs. Rutledge retired early to her sitting room upstairs. Mr. Rutledge went up too. Caroline received a few friends who dropped in but departed early because, as they told her frankly, she was deadly dull.

Caroline made no attempt to hold them, as she had made no attempt to entertain them. She could think of nothing but Howard. Waiting to be called to the telephone, to hear him at the door.

At twelve, in a quiet house, she went to bed, and tried to read herself to sleep with a mystery story. Just before dawn she turned out her bed lamp and did not need to turn it on again.

She slept past the hour of her breakfast tray. When she awoke the tiny clock that once had graced the dressing table of Marie Antoinette startled her with the lateness of the morning.

Her mind was instantly cleared of sleep. She wondered if her father had left the house. She wanted to talk with him. She rang a summons that indicated she wished prompt response. Yesterday a maid would have come quickly to her room when she rang like that.

She would start her own bath and dress while her breakfast was being prepared. The maid could take a message to her father, asking him not to go until she had seen him.

Busy in the bath, running the tub, adding the bath crystals, she did not count the moments as they slipped by. But as she was about to throw off her negligee she decided to ring again.

She rang a third time, keeping her finger on the bell to indicate her impatience. She listened, and presently heard steps outside her door. There was a knock.

"Come in," she called.

It was her father who opened the door.

"What's happened to Hilda?" she asked. "Where is she?"

"Hilda, my dear, has departed, with the cook and the waitress. The chauffeur and the outside men will go this afternoon. Also the laundress."

Caroline was a trifle stunned. "But . . ." she began vaguely.

"I know," her father interrupted, "you haven't mother and I. Alva's struggling now with a contraption she's never seen before—a drip pot I believe it's called. I wonder if you could help her. Otherwise I'm afraid we'll be quite without coffee with our rolls."

"Funny," Caroline said mirthlessly, "but I've never made coffee. One of the boys always did it when cook was away. If it were something with ice . . ."

"No doubt. But at least come and try. I had no idea a kitchen could be such a complicated affair—nothing but mysterious gadgets. At first we couldn't tell the stove from the icebox."

Caroline laughed. There was a heavy fear on her heart—but she laughed. "The kitchen was done over last year. It's entirely electric now. A model kitchen, in fact. One of our best magazines published pictures of it and cook had to refuse simply crowds of people admittance to see it. She said they made off with all the small edibles."

"I'll report to your mother that you're fully acquainted with it. Get down as soon as you can. Will you?" her father urged.

Caroline did not wait. She fastened the sash of her negligee and went down as she was. Her mother—Alva Rutledge in the kitchen! If it weren't so tragic . . .

Alva was not so well groomed this morning. Her hair was disarranged, her face was flushed and—yes, it was tear-marked too. Her hands trembled and she presented a thoroughly pathetic picture as she struggled helplessly with an intricate glass and chromium coffee maker.

"Mother, the coffee isn't ground!" Caroline exclaimed.

"Isn't it? Well, it's all the kind there is in this house. What do you suppose Norah did with it?"

"I should say she ground it," Caroline suggested. "There's something around here for that purpose. Electric, of course."

"Do you think you can find it?" Caroline went over to the counter where the electric mixer stood. "I think the attachments are in a drawer here," she said and began to search among the bewildering array of equipment there.

They couldn't, however, tell the coffee grinder from the food chopper, so they gave it up and were about to have tea instead of coffee when Caroline was struck with an idea that had its root in the past.

"We might crush the beans like ice," she said. "And we'll use a wooden mallet—never mind the electric jiggle. This will be your job, Father. Here's a tea towel,"—taking one from a drawer—"fold the beans inside it and pound them."

Mr. Rutledge pounded the beans, incidentally cracking a tile of the sink drain and popping a bean up into his eye when he gave a hole in the towel. Some of the beans remained whole, others were broken, a few were pulverized. The coffee was terrible.

They spooned their oranges, and Mrs. Rutledge preferred juice. She topped an egg and found the egg entirely uncooked. She pushed the aside and nibbled on a badly toasted roll. Mr. Rutledge contented himself with the orange and a sip or two of coffee. Caroline drank milk and put marmalade on her roll. Her mother warned her heartily against obesity.

At first they skirted the subject upon most of their minds, but Alva Rutledge was too resentful against her former servants long to remain quiet about them.

"Walking out on us like this!" she exclaimed indignantly. "What absurd notion do you suppose possessed them?"

"It wasn't an absurd notion, my dear," her husband assured her. "I came down last night and told them to clear out first thing in the morning."

"But Philip! How foolish. Just the same I think it was ungrateful of them to leave as they did. They probably imagined they wouldn't receive their wages."

"They knew they wouldn't," Philip corrected her. "I told them I couldn't give them the customary notice. They offered to stay without pay until they found other places. I let them go."

Alva's face drained white. "You asked them to leave me like this—with this house?"

Her husband's eyes wavered away from hers. "The house is no longer ours," he said miserably.

Surgery Aids In "Banti's Disease"

Dr. Copeland Tells About This Ailment of Late Childhood

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.
United States senator from New York
Former Commissioner of Health,
New York City

"BANTI'S DISEASE," or "splenic anemia," as it is sometimes called, is an unusual affliction characterized by marked enlargement of the spleen.

The disease sometimes appears in adults but is more often found in children. As a rule it occurs late in childhood, usually after the tenth year.

The disease is slow in progress. It may be overlooked until symptoms such as shortness of breath and anemia occur.

Occasionally there is slight rise in temperature. In a good many instances the child has repeated nose bleeds which may be the first sign of trouble to attract the attention of the parent.

The Symptoms

The young sufferer is pale, underweight and appears anemic. He has little desire for food, is easily irritated and does not play well with other children. Sometimes the child is thought to have grown too rapidly. But in most cases he is below average height as well as being underweight.

In Banti's disease the spleen is moderately enlarged and firm. It continues to grow. There is usually a slight increase in the size of the liver as well. The sufferer begins to complain of faulty digestion, constipation and other intestinal disturbances. Jaundice may result from obstruction of the flow of bile.

The spleen is a purplish gland located in the abdomen on the left side of the body, just below the lower end of the stomach. It is believed to produce the red corpuscles found in the blood. It also manufactures the hemoglobin which gives the coloring matter to these cells. This work is also a function of the liver and if the spleen is diseased or unable to function properly, its work is taken over by the liver.

Removal of the Spleen

For many years little relief could be offered the young sufferers from Banti's disease. Within recent times successful results have been obtained by the removal of the spleen. In former years this surgical procedure was not resorted to, because it was thought that life could not exist without the spleen. It is now known that the spleen can be removed without apparent detrimental effects to the body.

"Splenectomy" or removal of the spleen is not so serious an operation as it would seem. It is of great benefit in some cases when performed in the early stages of Banti's disease. When the disease is allowed to progress and the liver and other organs become involved, operation is of no avail.

Enlargement of the spleen occurs in disturbances other than Banti's disease. But enlargement of the spleen in children should arouse suspicion of this disease.

Every effort should be made to determine the underlying cause. Rickets, malaria, tuberculosis and other constitutional diseases are factors that must not be overlooked as among the possible causes of enlargement of the spleen.

A mere desire to do right isn't enough. Those who hanged witches had that.

String Crochet Makes Inexpensive and Handsome Gifts

It is the crocheter who, this year, has the great advantage when it comes to Christmas gifts. All she need do is get a big hank of twine and her crochet hook and make this lovely medallion. Before she knows it, she'll have them fairly rolling off her needle, all ready to be made into chair back sets, scarfs, dollies and—if she's ambitious and wants to present a gift that will be handled from one generation to the next—a bedspread.

In pattern 5142 you will find complete instructions for making the medallion shown; an illustration of it and the stitches needed; material requirements and color arrangements.

Despite Levies, Fichter Says Solons Must Act

COLUMBUS, Nov. 9.—Ohio voters approved more than 500 special school levies on the ballots in Tuesday elections in approximately 775 school districts, Joseph W. Fichter, assistant director of the state education department, estimated on the basis of incomplete returns today.

However, according to Fichter's estimate, the proposed levies in about 250 districts failed. The schools in the latter case put their financial problems squarely on the shoulders of the coming special session of the legislature. Where levies failed in state aid school districts, the latter will be cut off from state aid January 1, unless the legislature revamps the school laws, Fichter said.

MAY BE CLOSED

In other districts where levies failed and where the schools do not receive state aid, schools may be forced to close at the first of the year "or soon after" because of lack of money unless the legislature enacts laws to help them, according to Fichter. The latter based his estimates on returns from more than 200 school districts. There, complete returns showed that 135 school levies passed and approximately 80 failed. However, Fichter said that a total of about only 250 would fail to approve the levies in his belief.

"The approval by the voters of the special levies," Fichter said, "was very encouraging. It shows that the public has not abandoned the schools."

"This is particularly true when you stop to consider that many voters were hesitant to vote in favor of levies, feeling that the financing of schools should be the problem of the state legislature

UP TO ASSEMBLY

The school levies approved will lend "subsistence rations" to the favored schools, he said, but will not definitely solve their problems. He pointed out that the schools in districts where levies were approved will be able to borrow in anticipation of funds from the levies after January 1 for needed operating expenses.

"However," Fichter declared, "it still remains for the legislature to work out a statewide program for relief of the schools. Until the legislature acts, of course, we cannot definitely predict the fate of the future of our schools and the picture cannot be made clear until the general assembly does act."

Mrs. Thurn Gives Pointers On the Correct Diet for Child of School Age

Dear Friends in Circleville:

The work of research and experiment in child diets is one of the most interesting to dietitians and it is one which physicians and others specializing in diet will probably never abandon. The magazines are filled with articles about babies in Soviet Russia and in Italy, with articles on what Sweden does for its young children and with other enlightening articles on this work as carried out in many countries.

In our own country through organized groups, and through individuals working to the laudable end of making healthier children, minimizing child diseases and child deaths, The U. S. Department of Agriculture at Washington issues bulletins, free for the asking on food for children and on other subjects related to the diet and health of children. Send for these if you have unusual problems with your young family, and if the local school is making no effort to educate mothers on the home care of and feeding of children.

Meanwhile remember that the food the child eats makes a difference in his growth and development and in his fitness for life. Be sure that his diet includes all the materials necessary for good bones, sound teeth and energy to play and study.

Here are some menus for dinners which will serve as family meals, and yet which are especially designed for the child of school age. Give a glass of milk an hour before each meal.

Recipes For School Children

The beef stew with vegetables is especially nourishing. To make it use one and one half pounds beef, rump or round; one fourth cup flour; two onions, chopped; one quart water; three cups diced potatoes; two cups diced carrots; salt; two tablespoons of chopped parsley.

Wipe the meat with a clean, damp cloth and cut it in cubes. Try out the fat in a skillet and add the meat, which has been rolled in the flour, and the chopped onion. Cook and stir until brown. Then transfer the meat and onions to a kettle. Add the water, after first pouring it into the skillet so as to get the full benefit of the browned meat flavor. Cover and simmer about one hour. Add the vegetables and cook until they are tender. Season with salt and sprinkle the top with the parsley after the stew is placed in a serving dish.

Liver and Rice Loaf

One half cup rice, four cups of boiling water; one pound sliced liver; two tablespoons shortening; one small onion chopped fine; one cup chopped celery; one fourth cup chopped parsley; two tablespoons flour; one cup tomato, canned or fresh; two teaspoons salt.

Cook the rice in boiling water until tender. Do not drain, but let the rice absorb the water so as to form a sticky mass which will act as a binder for the loaf. Wash the liver under running water quickly, and remove the skin. Sprinkle the liver with salt and flour and cook in the fat in a skillet for about three minutes. Remove the liver and grind or chop it very fine. Cook the onion, celery and parsley in the drippings, for a few minutes, add the flour and tomatoes, and stir briskly until thickened. Then mix all the ingredients until thoroughly blended, form into a loaf with the hands on a parchment paper, place on a rack in an open roasting pan. Bake for about thirty minutes in a moderate, 350 degrees oven.

Scalloped Cabbage and Apples

This is another dish much appreciated by children. Two quarts shredded cabbage; one quart tart, sliced apples; two teaspoons salt; two to four tablespoons butter; one teaspoon of sugar; one cup buttered bread crumbs.

Place alternate layers of cabbage and apples in a greased baking dish. Season each with salt and fat and sprinkle the sugar over the apples. Spread the buttered crumbs over the last layer. Cover and bake in a moderate oven, 350 degrees, for forty-five minutes or until the cabbage and apples are tender. Remove the cover toward the last of the baking so that the crumbs can brown. Serve from the dish.

To make the carrot and cabbage salad use; one package lemon gelatin; one pint warm water, two tablespoons vinegar; one teaspoon salt, one cup raw carrots, grated; one cup cabbage, shredded.

Dissolve the gelatin in warm water, add vinegar and salt, chill. When slightly thickened, fold in the carrots and cabbage. Turn into individual molds. Chill until firm. Unmold on crisp lettuce. Garnish with mayonnaise, and cheese balls. Roll the balls in grapefruit, or ground peanuts.

TOOK PILLS FOR 30 YEARS, THEN CEREAL BROUGHT RELIEF

Mr. Forsythe Endorses ALL-BRAN for Constipation

If you suffer from headaches, loss of appetite and energy or any other of the frequent effects of constipation, read this voluntary letter:

"After taking pills and tablets for about thirty years for constipation, I started to take your ALL-BRAN three times a day according to directions. Today I can eat cheese, and that is binding, and certainly feel fine."—Mr. E. Forsythe, Box 219, Youngstown, N. Y.

Science says ALL-BRAN provides "bulk" to exercise the intestines, and vitamin B to further aid regular habits. In addition, ALL-BRAN is rich in blood-building iron.

The "bulk" in ALL-BRAN is much like that of leafy vegetables. Inside the body, it forms a soft mass which gently clears the intestines of wastes.

Isn't this pleasant "cereal way" far more healthful than using patent medicines—so often habit-forming?

Just eat two tablespoonfuls daily. In serious cases use with each meal. If not relieved this way, see your doctor.

PURINA MILLS Circleville, Ohio

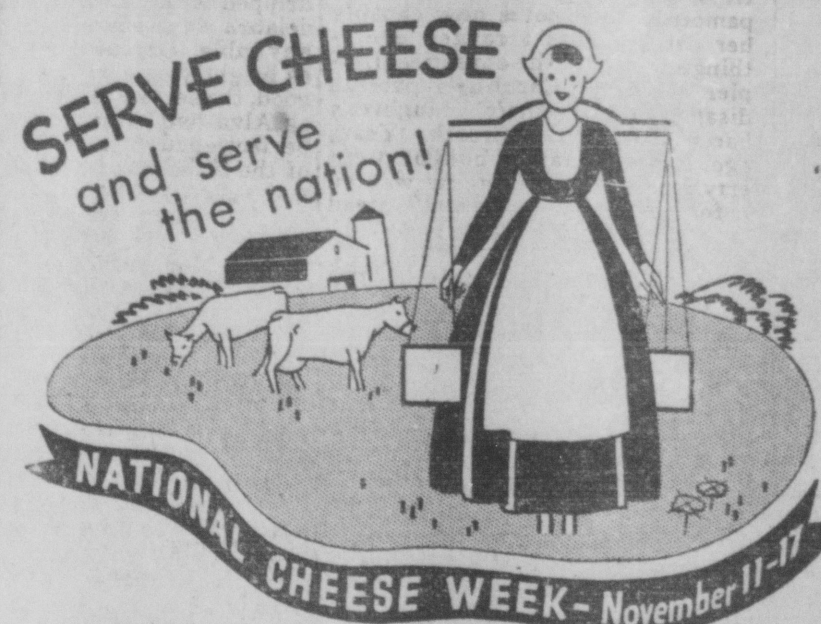

Hua, of Starling Family
The hua is a bird allied to the starling, confined to a small region in the mountains of New Zealand. The name "hua" is the native Maori name and is probably imitative of its note. The bird is peculiar in the sexual differentiation of the beak. The males have a short, stout and straight beak, while that of the female is long, slender and curved. The black, white-tipped tail feathers were formerly much prized by the Maori chiefs and worn as insignia of rank.

PLENTY OF THRILLS IN CHICAGO BATTLE

COLUMBUS, Nov. 9. — Grid-iron fans who like football games that thrill them to ecstatic heights one moment, and chills the next are in for a great afternoon Saturday at Ohio stadium when the Chicago Maroons and the Ohio Buckeyes renew relations after a lapse since 1927.

This contest will bring together two great offensive machines, exponents of the open style of play and coached by men who believe in a varied and versatile attack. Although the straight end sweeps and line smashes will not be neglected, it will be a battle of forward passes, laterals, forward laterals, lateral forwards, double reverses, and other tricks that will cause the spectators to gasp.

Ruth Hits Pair, Pleasing Japs

SENDAI, Japan, Nov. 9.—Forty thousand freezing spectators roared with enthusiasm when Babe Ruth knocked out his first home run of his Japanese tour today, and then the crowd went stark, screaming mad with joy when he hit another homer in the same game.

Never before in his long career that ended this season had Ruth seen a demonstration like the Sendai fans produced when the Babe obliged with the home runs that Tokyo and Hakodate had yelled for in vain.

The Americans won, 7 to 0, in a game that, to the Japanese, was the best yet played here. They had enough home runs to talk about for the rest of their lives. Besides Ruth's two, Jimmy Foxx, Charley Gehringer, and Bing Miller each smashed homers.

Connie Mack, who is managing the Americans, again was surprised at the smooth playing of the Japanese, whom he rates on a par with American AA leagues.

Reports from Tokyo said that the big stadium had again been sold out for the remaining two games there, although seats commanded high premiums after Ruth's two homers.

Troops Increase Saar Tension

Geoffrey Knox, League of Nations commissioner, in Saar.

A Saar pre-election crowd

Reports that France is moving troops to the Saar border for use in an emergency reveal the tension held for the outcome of the plebiscite, Jan. 13, when 800,000 Saar residents decide whether they prefer France, Germany or the League of Nations to rule them. According to the Versailles Treaty in 1919, the Saar's coal mines were to be used by France as a war reparation, but Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler, since his ascension to power, has demanded return of the Saar to Germany. Remembering the fate of their compatriots in Germany, Catholics, Communists, Socialists, Jews and pacifists are opposing Saar Nazis at the ballot boxes, and should Germany's Nazis attempt to capture the Saar by a putsch, it is indicated that French troops will be ready to march in.

BOWLERS TO BANQUET

We eat Nov. 20.—A banquet for last year's city ten pin league will be held at 8:30 p. m.—All reservations are to be made with Warren Baker before Nov. 12.

Here's an interesting sports yarn written by Stratton of the Wilmington News Journal...

"TIPPY DYE" is blazing a trail on Big Ten gridirons which leave opponents wondering what the mighty mite who is only a sophomore will be doing with that pigskin before he graduates. Playing his first year as a regular Buckeye quarterback he has proved a field general who can match wits with the best in the Western Conference and is in addition a good passer and broken field runner.

Bowling News

Container Corporation keglers took possession of the Circleville recreation alley Thursday evening for their weekly bout. On the basis of scores, not counting handicaps, the office won a pair from the powers and the papermakers won three in a row from the main-tainers. The C. C. of A. boys use the handicap system so the actual winners are not certain.

MATTHEWS CAPTAIN

DELAWARE, Nov. 9.—Johnny Matthews of Ashland, O., varsity player on the Ohio Wesleyan eleven, who captained the Battling Bishops when they met Denison University here Saturday.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Nov. 9

Art Clarkson's return to condition for tomorrow's game between Minnesota and Indiana promised a powerful passing attack in the offensive of the undefeated Gophers.

CHICAGO, Nov. 9

Chicago's football team moved on Columbus today for the Ohio State game with two of its ace ball carriers, Jay Berwanger and Ned Bartlett, out with injuries. The lineup to be used tomorrow remained in doubt.

"Gable? He Won't Get a Hit With Us in There"

The Dean boys—Duffy and Dizzy—who were largely accountable for the fact that the St. Louis Cardinals won the world series, have entered the movies. The star pitchers are shown at a baseball field in Brooklyn with Sam Sax, of a movie company, and William De Witt, right, treasurer of the Cardinals, while making a motion picture "short". So, watch out Clark Gable!

Frick Selection New Peace Move

NEW YORK, Nov. 9.—The election of Ford Frick as president of the National league was seen to be a handshake between baseball and the press.

The boyish-appearing Frick—he won't be 40 until Dec. 19—has promised close co-operation between himself as president of the league and his former co-workers, he sports writers of the country.

There have been times in the past when many a sports writer did not hesitate to sink a typewriter in a baseball skull. And there have been other occasions when the baseball people could cheerfully have crowned the sports writers with a bat.

MAY CONVERT TERRY

Frick's election will go far toward erasing any friction and the friendly Frick may even have Bill Terry and the sports writers singing together over their stints. And that, my friends, will be an event worthy of the history books when and if it happens.

Still, I wouldn't gamble that Ford can't turn the trick. Like other famous Hoosiers before him—George Ade, James Whitcomb Riley, George Barr McCutcheon, Lew Wallace and Meredith Nicholson—Ford has a way of getting things done.

Tall, slender and dark, he has a friendly grin and a friendlier word for everybody.

Think of what he has accomplished in his 39 years. Born at Wawaka, Ind. (and don't bother hunting that one on a map because you probably won't find it) in 1894, he was graduated from De Pauw University in 1915. Like most other Hoosiers he immediately grabbed a typewriter and went to work on the papers.

In 1921 we find him on a paper in Colorado Springs and covering the Pueblo flood so well that he attracted the attention of Arthur Brisbane, No. 1 man of the newspaper world, who brought Ford to New York as a sports writer.

"HOWDY FOLKS"

I can't describe him for you better than his own warm greeting of the radio—"Howdy folks." That's just what he is—a howdy folks sort of person—friendly, agreeable and smart. He knows all the answers in baseball and he'll smooth over many a rough spot between baseball and the scribes. He knows the problems on both sides.

New Department

Several of the President's influential advisers seriously envision establishment of a new department of the Government by the 1935 Congress.

The plan has been broached to Roosevelt, and was discussed at one Cabinet meeting.

The new agency would be known as the Department of Public Welfare, would be headed by a full-fledged Cabinet member.

Into it would be thrown a number of established bureaus and services, plus several new ones to be created next year. The bureaus are:

- Bureau of Education—now under Interior Department.
- Public Health Service—now under the Treasury.
- Children's Bureau—now under the Labor Department.
- Women's Bureau—also under Labor.

Banking the Last Shot

By IRVIN S. COBB

THE two following Scotch stories are in the same vein and therefore are paired here to show the many stories that probably had the same original tale as a parent.

"Well," said the boy, "I will take it to one bank and have it changed to dimes, then I'll take it to another bank and have the dimes changed to nickels; then I'll go to still another bank and have the nickels changed to pennies."

"Why go to all that bother?" asked the friend.

"Well, someone might make a mistake. The other version is that a Scot was cashing a fifty dollar check at a bank. He asked that he be given one dollar bills and when he received the notes, he started counting them very carefully, stopping when he reached the forty-ninth.

"Why don't you count the fiftieth?" inquired the attendant.

"Aha," answered the Scot, "there might be two there."

Republicans and Democrats have no monopoly on Coolidges in Massachusetts. In the recent election one Albert Coolidge ran for state office on the Socialist ticket.

Clarence M. Wooley, Chairman of the American Radiator and Standard Sanitary Corporation, operating one of the best economic and statistical bureaus in the country, reported that since August 10

Will Rogers Pick A Story For This Spot

By WILL ROGERS

RACE track touts are forever telling people who seem to have more ready cash than is good for them what horse is just bound to win the next race. They are worse than politicians, they will volunteer to give you the exact inside information on anything, for a consideration.

Well, once there were two touts and they wanted a Scotchman to bet on a race. He had never bet and he didn't want to do it, but finally risked a Shilling. The Horse won at 10 to 1, and the Bookmaker paid him 11 Shillings. The Scotchman took each one as it was handed to him and bit each one of them carefully.

"What's the matter?" asked the Bookie. "Do you think my money is no good?"
"No, no, Marnie!" responded the Scotchman, "But I just wanted to make sure the Sniffing I gave you wasn't among them."

Held Ham and Iren Fair
Each year in France great numbers of sturdy Norman peasants travel to Paris to attend the annual ham and iron fair. Although Normandy has no separate political existence, it was for centuries in ancient times a territory over which both France and England fought many bitter and bloody battles. Normandy, which lies opposite England on the English channel, was united with France from 1103 to 1204, when France regained possession. In 1790, when the French departments were created, Normandy became one with other political divisions of France.—Chicago Tribune.

WEAK AND SKINNY MEN, WOMEN AND CHILDREN
Saved by new Vitamins of Cod Liver Oil in tasteless tablets.

Pounds of firm healthy flesh instead of bare scraggy bones! New vigor, vim and energy instead of tired listlessness! Steady quiet nerves! That is what thousands of people are getting through scientists' latest discovery—the Vitamins of Cod Liver Oil concentrated in little sugar coated tablets without any of its horrid, fishy taste or smell.

McGoy's Cod Liver Oil Tablets, they're called "Cod Liver Oil in Tablets", and they simply work wonders. A little boy of 3, seriously sick, got well and gained 10½ lbs. in just one month. A girl of thirteen after the same disease, gained 3 lbs. the first week and 2 lbs. each week after. A young mother who could not eat or sleep after baby came got all her health back and gained 10 lbs. in less than a month.

You simply must try McGoy's at once. Remember if you don't gain at least 3 lbs. of firm healthy flesh in a month get your money back. Demand and get McGoy's—the original and genuine Cod Liver Oil Tablets—sponsored by Good Housekeeping Institute. Refuse all substitutes—insist on the original McGoy's—there are none better.

RFC LEADER SEES CLIMB

WASHINGTON, Nov. 9.—Better business was sighted today by Chairman Jesse H. Jones of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation with the passing of election uncertainty and campaign bitterness.

The Roosevelt administration, he emphasized, is ready to cooperate restore normal business—not to destroy it.

"We ought not to disregard the fact that we cannot start business in high speed," Jones told International News Service.

"But business ought to quit holding back, and go forward with confidence. My own belief is that business will pick up, with acceptance of Tuesday's verdict by business and industry as an unqualified approval of the president's program and policies."

SPARKS CRIES FOR CHANGES IN PARTY

COLUMBUS, Nov. 9—The sonorous voice of C. Nelson Sparks, former mayor of Akron, was added today to the loud cry for complete liberalization and reorganization of the tottering Republican party in Ohio.

Sparks, who supported his party's gubernatorial nominee, Clarence J. Brown, after being defeated by Brown in the Republican primary, again cast off the moorings that held his bark in line with the G. O. P. organization only for the duration of the Fall campaign.

Politics Breaks Gloria's Romance

Testimony that politics helped to break up her romance with Michael Farmer, Irish sportsman, was presented in behalf of Gloria Swanson, film actress, when she was granted an interlocutory divorce decree from her fourth husband in Los Angeles. Miss Lois Wilson, actress-friend of Miss Swanson, testified that Farmer once became abusive of his wife when she sought to discuss a radio talk of President Roosevelt, telling her that "she didn't know anything about politics". This photo shows the couple in a happier day.

ership of the Republican party in Ohio," he declared, "should be thrown out bag and baggage and a wholesome and decent citizenship of constructive liberalism should take hold of the party wreckage and rebuild it, beginning today—not tomorrow."

Result of Tuesday's election which witnessed the overwhelming defeat of Brown for governor and of the veteran old guard Republican, Sen. Simeon D. Fess, who sought re-election, was not surprising to Sparks.

ing to Sparks. "It was not surprising to anyone in Ohio," he said, "except to those alleged Republican state leaders and their kind who have been dreaming false dreams for the past three months of a return to the old system of special privilege through lobby control."

Sparks prefaced his remarks with a statement that he is not now and does not intend to be a candidate for governor in 1936, but he said he believed the result of Tuesday's election "calls for an honest expression" from men who have been active in the Republican party.

"Thousands of sincere and earnest Republicans," he continued, "are today convinced that the many thousands of other Republicans who did not support either the state or national Republican ticket believe that the old reactionary leaders of our party have utterly failed to recognize the urgent need for a new party social vision."

The DAILY WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

By DREW PEARSON and ROBERT S. ALLEN

New Labor Legislation Will Be Bitterly Fought In Congress

WASHINGTON — Important labor legislation to be introduced at the coming Congress already is being discussed in inner Administration councils.

The issue will present some of the knottiest political and industrial problems facing Roosevelt, and will cause some of the bitterest fighting of the session.

That much discussed Section 7a—along with the entire National Industrial Recovery Act—will expire next year unless renewed. Under the stimulus of this collective bargaining guaranty organized labor has experienced one of the greatest revivals in its history.

It is prepared not only to fight to the last ditch for the continuance of the statute, but will seek its extension.

Labor wants the law amended so that company unionism—the device used by employers to counter independent labor organizations—will be legally outlawed.

Senator Bob Wagner's Labor Disputes Bill, which he offered last session, would have done this. The President, however, was not willing to go that far, so the measure, despite powerful labor pressure, was shelved. Instead was enacted the law under which the National Labor Relations Board now functions.

On the other hand, industry is just as determined. It is grimly opposed to any enactment striking at company unions.

More than that, the employers want Section 7a rewritten along two lines: first, inclusion of a provision legalizing company unions; second, exclusion of the majority rule interpretation that the National Labor Board has read into Section 7a.

Between these two hotly embattled groups stands the President.

Both sides will exert every effort to win his backing. It is to avoid such a distressing tug-of-war that White House strategists already have begun formulation of an Administration labor program as a middle-of-the-road plan.

No Politician

There is a young lady clerk in Secretary Henry Wallace's office who knows her New Dealers.

Recently a prominent Washingtonian telephoned that local baseball fans were getting up a testimonial to Babe Ruth on his retirement as an active player. He wanted to call on the Secretary of Agriculture to obtain his signature.

"I'm sorry," the young lady replied, "but it is impossible. The Secretary is too busy today. He is dated up every moment of the time."

"Well, the President is a busy man, and he found time," the caller pleaded.

"That is the difference between the two men," the girl replied, and hung up.

Foreign Influence

Some of the career diplomats are privately worried about the charge that they are more partial to the countries in which they are stationed than to the United States.

This came to a head not long ago when Ted Marriner, counselor of the American Embassy in Paris, was quoted in the French press as saying he understood France better than America.

Now there are reports that John White, amiable counselor of the American Embassy in Berlin, has Nazi sympathies.

Not long ago Douglas Miller, American commercial attaché, drew up a report on Germany's economic condition for the use of Richard Washburn Child, then studying European conditions for

BOY, 13, JUMPING ON TRAIN, KILLED

LEG CUT OFF, SMITH YOUTH SHOCK VICTIM

Thrown Under Wheels as N. & W. Slows Down Near Freight House

A 13-year-old boy was dead today. He failed in an effort to get a ride on a Norfolk & Western freight train early Thursday evening, was thrown under the cars and lost his left leg near the hip. He died two hours later in Berger hospital of shock and loss of blood.

William David Smith, 220 W. High-st., stepson of L. C. Scott, was playing near the freight house with his brother, Earl, 6, when an eastbound freight train neared them. The train was flashed a slow signal, since a Pennsylvania train was on the S. Court-st cross, and its engineer slowed it. The elder Smith boy leaped for the train but was thrown under the wheels.

DIED IN TWO HOURS

The Albaugh ambulance answered a call to the scene and rushed the injured boy to Berger hospital. The shock and loss of blood were too great, however, the boy expiring shortly after 7 o'clock.

The Norfolk & Western train crew was not aware of the accident until it reached Chillicothe. Deputy Sheriff Robert Armstrong investigated the accident.

The boy was born in this city June 19, 1921, a son of William Smith and Beattie Arledge. His father is deceased.

Besides his mother and stepfather, L. C. Scott, he is survived by a sister, Waneta Smith of Cincinnati; three brothers, Melvin, Donald and Earl; three half-brothers, Junior, Millard and Willard Scott, and a half-sister, Ida May Scott.

FUNERAL MONDAY

The funeral will be Monday at 2:30 p. m. at the Christian Union church with burial in Forest cemetery by M. S. Rinehart.

DR. JEMISON ON CHURCH PROGRAM

Pastor Who Preached Here When Present Church Was Built Talks at 7:30.

Dr. D. H. Jemison, of Cincinnati, who was pastor of the local First Methodist Episcopal church twenty-five years ago, when the present church building was erected, will speak at the celebration service this evening at 7:30.

Dr. and Mrs. Jemison will be entertained in the home of Mr. and Mrs. C. R. Barnhart, Montclair-ave., while in the city.

Special music for this evening will be furnished by the choir.

The largest audience of the week greeted Dr. Franklin McElfresh and Dr. J. C. Arbuckle, Thursday night. Both speakers delivered timely and much appreciated messages. The music was provided by Dr. Lilly's choir, which received much favorable comment.

Dr. R. O. McClure, of Columbus, and Dr. L. C. Sparks, of Newark, are the speakers for 10:30 Sunday morning.

The general public is invited to the vesper service at 4 p. m. Sunday, when the combined choirs of Washington C. H. will appear in a sacred concert. There will be no charge.

Auto on Fire, Driver Goes to Engine House

You've heard of persons unconsciously riding beside or near a snake for a number of miles, and you've heard of other similar incidents, but C. S. Sanderson, of Columbus, who is working for the highway department near East Ringgold, did an "original" Friday morning.

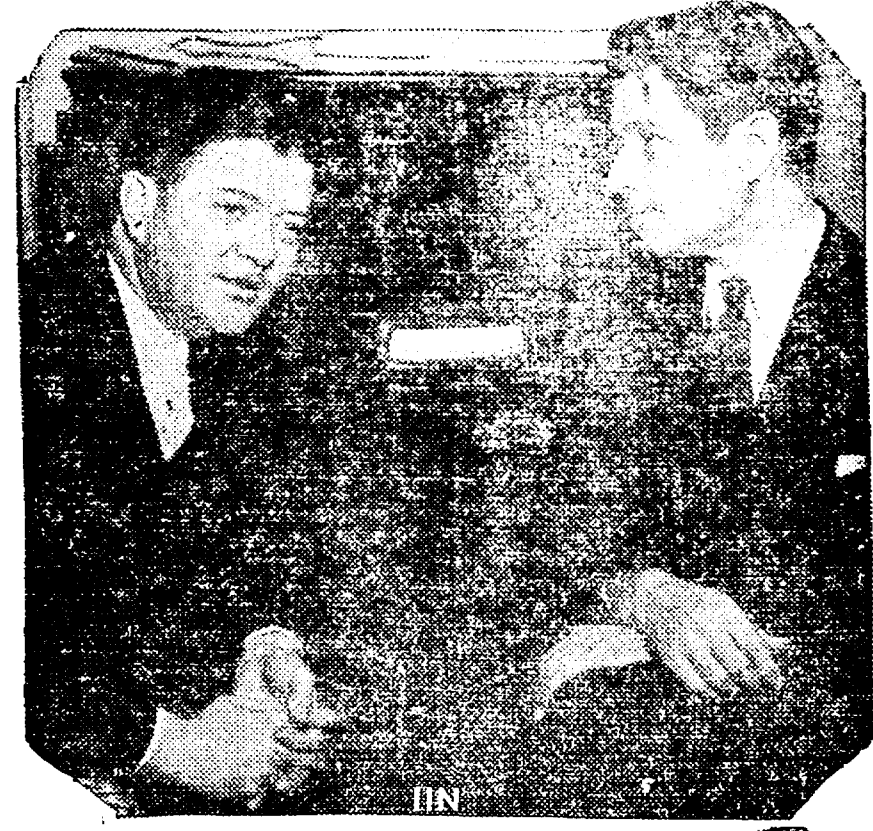

He drove his new car practically the entire distance from Columbus to this city while it was afire. The flames started in the rear seat and did much damage.

Obligingly Sanderson drove the machine to the fire department to have the blaze extinguished.

Johnson died of a heart attack. He had been employed by the Columbus board of education for the last 12 years.

The deceased was returning home in the car of his sterson, Chauncey Winegardner, Hilliards.

La Follettes Win With New Party

Here are Senator Robert La Follette, left, and his brother Philip rejoicing in Madison, Wis., as they listened to the final precinct returns that indicated their newly formed Progressive Republican party had ridden the national Democratic landslide to victory at the state polls. Senator "Bob" won his battle for re-election easily, though "Phil", running against both Democrats and the G. O. P. regulars for another term as governor, encountered stiffer resistance.

Seven Endorsed as Enumerators

Seven Pickaway-co rural residents were endorsed, Thursday evening, by the Pickaway-co Democratic executive committee as enumerators of an agricultural census. The county's quota is seven.

The names of William H. Hulse, Jackson-twp.; C. O. Smith, Madison-twp.; J. M. Tottle, Monroe-twp.; Jesse Pitt, Muhlenberg-twp.; Wilbur P. Pontius, Pickaway-twp.; William M. Beavers, Scioto-twp.; and William Goode, Washington-twp., will be forwarded to Congressman Mell G. Underwood, who will receive the appointment for the men.

Work is expected to start about December 1.

21 SOUGHT JOBS

Twenty-nine applicants for the enumerator jobs.

There were 21 applicants for the enumerator jobs. Twenty-nine committee members attended the meeting which was presided over by George G. Adkins, chairman.

Circleville is in district No. 7 of Ohio with headquarters at Chillicothe. According to plans, the Chillicothe district, one of seven in the state, will be comprised of 17 counties.

The state has been divided for purposes of the census without regard to Congressional districts and with concern only to the farm population, size of the farms, and number of census interviews necessary in a given area. Headquarters of the other six districts in Ohio are Lima, Marion, Cleveland, Dayton, Columbus, Zanesville.

Other counties comprising the Chillicothe district and the tentative number of enumerators scheduled for each are: Adams, 10; Athens, 7; Brown, 16; Clermont, 15; Fairfield, 15; Gallia, 10; Highland, 15; Hocking, 5; Jackson, 5; Lawrence, 8; Meigs, 8; Perry, 6; Pike, 5; Ross, 8; Scioto, 7; Vinton, 4.

TO BE TRAINED

Reports of enumerators will be handled through the headquarters in Chillicothe. Special training is being given supervisors in the various areas. It was stated, on of many of the questions which account of the important nature will be asked in the census.

The schedule of questions, about 100 in all, will include information for other departments of the government and for several emergency agencies, among which are AAA, PERA, and the Federal Farm Loan Board.

Columbus Man Dies After Kin's Funeral

Grant Johnson, 65, of 95 E. Ninth-ave., Columbus, died in an automobile Thursday afternoon near South Bloomfield while returning home after attending the funeral of his brother, Peter, in Darbyville.

Johnson died of a heart attack. He had been employed by the Columbus board of education for the last 12 years.

The deceased was returning home in the car of his sterson, Chauncey Winegardner, Hilliards.

Johnson died of a heart attack. He had been employed by the Columbus board of education for the last 12 years.

BANKS, COURTHOUSE CLOSE NEXT MONDAY

All banks of the city as well as county offices will be closed Monday in observance of Armistice day, a legal holiday.

BLOSSER LEAD FIXED 45,363

Takes 14 Counties From Rais; Home County Gives McCurdy Splendid Total.

Judge Peter J. Blosser, Chillicothe, defeated his townsman-opponent, Clarence Rais, Democrat, by 45,363 votes in the contest for judge of the court of appeals.

Blosser's present term does not expire until 1935 so he is certain to remain in office until 1941.

Complete returns show Judge Russell McCurdy, of Portsmouth, ahead of Judge James Thomas, also of the Scioto-co city, by 6,425 votes. McCurdy will serve until Feb. 1, 1939, the end of the term originally held by Judge Mauck, who expired.

Judge Thomas will remain on the bench through next Monday when the present court sits in Portsmouth to complete unfinished business.

WAVERLY, Nov. 9.—Under the watchful eyes of inspectors from the office of the secretary of state in Columbus, the official count of Pike county's vote in Tuesday's election was scheduled to start today.

The inspectors were sent here by Secretary of State George S. Myers following charges of irregularities in the county's balloting Tuesday. Pending the arrival of the inspectors, the ballots were impounded yesterday and locked in a bank vault.

Possibility existed that the entire vote may be recounted in certain precincts of the county.

KINGSFORD-SMITH IN NEW ATTEMPT

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 9.—Sir Charles Kingsford-Smith, twice conqueror of the Pacific airways between Australia and California, today was planning another hazardous flight.

The newly planned venture, the Australian ace revealed, will take him from Los Angeles to Australia, by air, via New York and London—a jaunt of some 17,000 miles.

The announcement came after an attachment filed against the pilot's plane, The Lady Southern Cross, in which he recently flew from Australia to Los Angeles, via San Francisco, had been lifted.

U. S. BUSINESS READY TO ACT FOR RECOVERY

Sound Plan of Cooperation Being Studied in "Let's go" Movement

WASHINGTON, Nov. 9.—Organized business is prepared today to say "Let's go" on a sound plan of co-operation with the administration to achieve recovery.

This was strongly indicated by business leaders today as election bitterness waned and all doubt as to the control of the "New Deal" was removed.

The outcome may be the offer by organized industry of a true similar to that proposed by the American Bankers' association. High administration officials have indicated that such a truce would be welcomed.

FOLLOWS JONES

Within 24 hours after Chairman Jesse H. Jones of the RFC sounded an optimistic note and urged business to "quit holding back," Robert L. Lund of St. Louis, chairman of the national association of manufacturers, said adoption of sound policies would lead to recovery.

In a message to International News Service, Lund said: "Industry has welcomed the statements in recent weeks from President Roosevelt and other high officials that recovery is to be sought through sound methods of co-operation that will build confidence."

"If this policy is followed by Congress, we shall soon be on our way to recovery. There is an abundance of private credit and purchasing power stored up awaiting the driving force of such a program."

Rudolph S. Hecht, of New Orleans, president of the American Bankers' association, said that "the offer of association officials to co-operate in recovery has no relation to political events one way or the other."

COMMITTEES WORK

The Bankers' association has committees at work co-operating with the administration export-import bank in an effort to promote foreign trade.

DOKE'S JURY IN DEADLOCK

California Jurors Deliberate Seven Hours, Resume; Rumors In Air.

WOODLAND, Cal., Nov. 9.—Deadlocked after seven hours of deliberation, the jury deciding the fate of Judson C. Duke, accused of murdering Lamar Hollingshead, wife today resumed consideration of the case.

There were two unofficial reports on the jury. One was to the effect the voting stood seven to five for acquittal of the defendant who killed Hollingshead, college poet, over the "white hibiscus" love of pretty Helen Louise Duke.

The other report was that three or four jurors were holding out for acquittal and refused to listen to arguments advised by the other jurors that Duke should be found guilty of either murder in the first degree with life imprisonment, or second degree murder with a sentence of from five years to life.

CAR STRIKES WAGON; WIFE, OTHERS ALONG

Chillicothe Man, Widely Known In Surgical World, Victim of Early Morning Accident: Face Mangled by Board from Straw-Wagon

Dr. Samuel M. Sproat, 45, Chillicothean widely known in the surgical world where he was making rapid strides toward success was instantly killed early Friday when his automobile struck the rear end of the straw-wagon driven by Charles Bush, E. Ohio-st. Both vehicles were going south on Route 23, the fatal accident happening 100 yards north of the John Dearth residence.

Dr. Sproat was killed by a board about two by three inches large which pierced his face. His face was badly mangled almost beyond recognition. His only other injury was a scalp wound on the right side of his head.

WIFE HYSTERICAL

Mrs. Sproat, who before her marriage was Miss Marjorie Story, was in the front seat with the surgeon and was slightly injured while Mr. and Mrs. Howard Moore, 141 N. Sugar-st, Chillicothe, riding in the rear seat also suffered minor injuries. All three were taken to Chillicothe by James Mattinson, this city. Mrs. Sproat was reported stricken with grief today.

All four Chillicotheans had been in Columbus. They left Chillicothe about 4 p. m. Thursday to attend a dinner-dance and a party afterward with friends of Mr. and Mrs. Moore. There is a discrepancy concerning the time of the accident.

Mr. Moore told Chillicothe newspapermen the quartet left Columbus about 4 a. m. the wreck happening about an hour later. Sheriff Charles Radcliff was called to the scene about 6:20 a. m.

Dr. Sproat's body was taken to the Albaugh Funeral home where it was claimed this morning by Carey Ware, Chillicothe.

WAGON LIGHTE

Investigation by the sheriff and Deputy Miller Fissell disclosed that Bush had a light on the rear of his wagon. It is not certain whether Dr. Sproat fell asleep or whether he did not see the light. Mr. Moore said he was dozing in the back seat and knew nothing of the crash until the car stopped in the middle of the road. Sproat's Pontiac 8-cylinder was badly damaged and the straw-wagon was demolished. A team drawing the wagon was only slightly hurt while Bush escaped injury with the exception of a few bruises. The straw-wagon was one of three under contract with the Container Corporation of America's plant here. The others were driven by Mark Tigner and Andy Benson, both of Logan-st.

Dr. C. E. Bowers, coroner, was called to the Albaugh funeral home to view the body. He pronounced death accidental.

Dr. Sproat was a member of a pioneer Ross-co family. He attended a military school before obtaining degrees at Ohio State university and the University of Michigan. He had served as a surgeon for the Union Pacific railroad on the west coast, and later, desiring to be near his home town, was transferred to Pontius, Minn., where he practiced for a while. Several years ago he removed to Chillicothe where he became known as a master surgeon. He was a member of the American College of Surgeons.

LEAVES TWO CHILDREN

Surviving are his widow, Mrs. Marjorie Story Sproat, two children, Marjorie, 11, and Ben, 4, a brother, Melvin, and a sister, Bernadette, all in the city. A sister, Mrs. Jack Chapman, of Appleton, Minn., also is a sister.

Funeral arrangements have not been completed.

CROWD HUNTS FALLEN CRAFT

Resident's of Catskill Mountain Town Witness Strange Plane's Crash.

BEACON, N. Y., Nov. 9.—State troopers and a group of volunteers were toiling up Mt. Beacon in the Catskill mountains today in an effort to reach an unidentified plane which crashed on the mountain's summit at 9:30 a. m.

The crash was seen by hundreds of Beacon residents who called police.

The incline railway leading up to the summer resort atop the 1545-foot mountain was pressed into service to help expedite the search for the victims.

Police could not determine whether a transport or mail plane had been wrecked.

HOUSING SURVEY IS DELAYED HERE

Survey of Circleville and Pickaway-co under the Federal Housing plan has been interrupted pending developments in the next day or two. Ten men were working at the survey.

It is reported that several of the men on the job were not listed in the National Re-employment office. All were to have lived in Circleville or Circleville-twp. It is also said, some of the workers were in other parts of the county.

An attaché of the Columbus PERA office and Howard Irwin, chief director, conferred Thursday with a result that Irwin had been called to Columbus Friday.

There were two unofficial reports on the jury. One was to the effect the voting stood seven to five for acquittal of the defendant who killed Hollingshead, college poet, over the "white hibiscus" love of pretty Helen Louise Duke.

MENTION GINGHER AS SENATE LEADER

COLUMBUS, Nov. 9.—Surveying the results of Tuesday's election as it affected the set-up of the state house of representatives, legislative observers here today conceded J. Preer Bittiger of Ashland, as a likely candidate for the Democratic floor leadership.

The house speakership, it was expected, probably will be between Former Speaker Arthur Hamilton of Lebanon, who has announced his candidacy for the post, and Rep. James Jones of Portage-co, the Republican leader in the 90th general assembly.

Hamilton was speaker of the house two years ago. He surrendered the post when the Democrats gained control.

LOST TO CAVE

Bittiger was a candidate for the speakership two years ago, but lost to Frank Cave of Mansfield. Keith Lawrence of Cleveland, later won the floor leadership.

After New Record

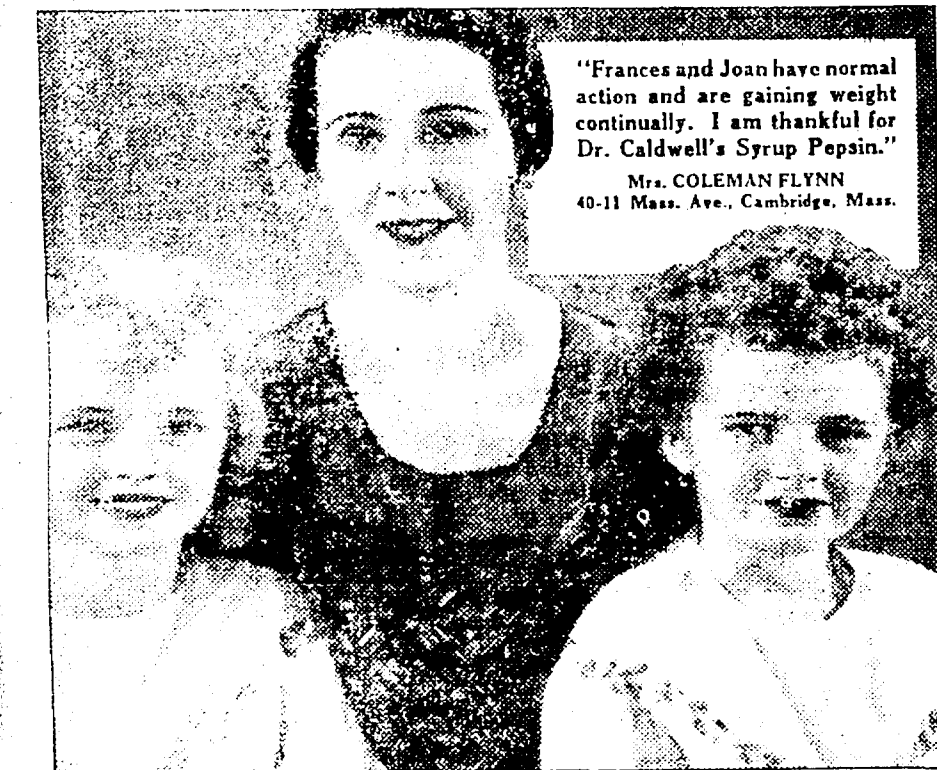

Capt. Eddie Rickenbacker

Flying in the sub-stratosphere, Capt. Eddie Rickenbacker, noted war ace and speed pilot, planned to take off from Los Angeles in his super-passenger plane in an attempt to lower the transcontinental transport plane record. Rickenbacker holds the present mark of 13 hours and 2 minutes.

BRONCHIAL TROUBLES

HELPS WHOLE FAMILIES

Attention, MOTHERS, to what every doctor knows to be a fact, and what they say to avoid

If you have children who are occasionally constipated, you should know this.

If you are "not yourself" because of a constipated condition, don't blame it on your blood condition, or your age, but first try this treatment that safely relieves sluggishness in children or adults.

The Proper Treatment

You can't safely relieve the bowels with any medicine if you can't regulate the dose. To regulate dosage, you should have a liquid laxative. When necessary to repeat, you can gradually reduce the dose. And that is the secret of safe relief from a sluggish, constipated condition at any age.

A liquid laxative can be measured. Its action can be thus controlled. If properly made, of such natural laxative elements as senna and cascara, it forms no habit—even in the youngest child. And such a laxative will help the bowels to help themselves.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is an approved liquid laxative containing ship. Cave now is out of the picture having taken a chance for the lieutenant governorship in the primaries and lost. Lawrence also is out of the house picture, having won election to the state senate.

State Sen. Paul P. Yoder (D) Dayton, who served as majority floor leader in the 90th General Assembly after illness forced the retirement of Sen. D. H. DeArmond (D) Hamilton, was expected to be a candidate for president pro tem. Another possible candidate was Sen. William H. Herner (D) Norwalk.

BOOST GINGHER

Prominently mentioned for Republican senate floor leader was Sen. Paul Gingher, Columbus. Other possible aspirants were Senators Frank Whittemore, Akron, and John Lloyd, Portsmouth.

There will be no women members of the new senate, and only three in the house of representatives. Alma Smith, (D) Parma, Ruth Lloyd (D) Portsmouth, and Mrs. Blanche E. Hoyer, (R) Akron, were elected to the House. Only 46 members of the present house were re-elected.

'YONNIE' IS GUILTY; GETS LIFE IN PEN

TOLEDO, Nov. 9.—Thomas (Yonnie) Licavoli, reputed northern Ohio gang leader, charged with first degree murder in four Toledo gangland slayings, was found guilty "with mercy" by a common pleas jury of seven men and five women here early this morning.

The jury received the case at 4:37 yesterday afternoon and deliberated just seven hours. Its verdict makes a life sentence in the Ohio penitentiary at Columbus mandatory for Licavoli.

Twelve of Licavoli's alleged henchmen were jointly indicted with the gang leader on the murder charges. Licavoli himself was accused of conspiracy in the killings of Abe Lubitsky and Norman Blatt on Oct. 6, 1931; Louise Bell on Nov. 30, 1932, and Jack Kennedy on July 7, 1933.

MAIL MAN KILLS WIFE, TRIES SUICIDE

GREENFIELD, Nov. 9.—Charles Pommert, 45, a government mail carrier, today shot and killed his wife and then turned the gun on himself, inflicting probably fatal wounds, according to police.

Pommert, with a bullet wound in the head, was believed dying.

According to authorities, Pommert killed his wife because he was despondent over her ill health. She had been virtually bed-ridden for several months. The wife was about 45 years of age.

MAN IS ARRESTED IN WIFE'S DEATH

COLUMBUS, Nov. 9.—U. S. District Attorney R. J. O'Donnell today pledged "full cooperation" to Fairfield-co authorities investigating the mysterious death of Mrs. Edna Kinsell, 41, that led to the arrest of her husband by federal authorities on charges of illicit possession of a still.

The husband, Leland, 34, was held in Franklin-co jail on the federal charge in default of $5,000 bond but O'Donnell said that government prosecution would be waived if the man was wanted on any charges growing out of the woman's death.

Meanwhile, U. S. Deputy Marshal Forbes Lampman, who arrested Kinsell, prepared to escort him to the funeral of the dead woman late this afternoon. Mrs. Kinsell, her husband claimed, had been killed in a fall down a flight of steps but Coroner E. E. Smith, of Franklin-co, charged she had been "beaten up."

NEW YORK, Nov. 9.—California is today as close to New York by passenger airplane as Pittsburgh is by railroad.

In other words, twelve hours away.

Captain Eddie Rickenbacker, leading American ace in the World war, established his second transcontinental speed record this year when he landed the plane at 8:45:50 o'clock last night on Newark airport after a one-stop flight of 12 hours, 3 minutes and 50 seconds from Los Angeles.

The single stop was made at Kansas City where it took only twelve minutes to re-fuel and change the radio crystals.

DAGON IN CRASH

Ernest Dagon was reported slightly injured when the Ford truck he was driving, belonging to Sam Winough, went over a bank near the Sturm and Dillard gravel washer about 1:30 today.

Careful With Decoration

Japanese lacquer objects, which are ranked with the most perfect works of art ever made, are produced with infinite care, writes Daniel Simon, Virginia, Minn., in Collier's Weekly. Often as many as 20 coats are applied, each being put on at sea to avoid dust, and months apart to allow for drying and polishing. Incidentally, lacquer will not dry in dry air. It only attains its maximum hardness in the presence of moisture.

Byrnie, a Shirt

A byrnie was a shirt of mail which in the time of the Crusaders reached only to the hips, but in the Tenth century extended to the knees. The sleeves were made wide and short, affording no protection for the forearm.

MAN AT TOP AFTER HARDSHIPS

NEW YORK musical circles are thrilling to another saga of courage as revealed in the life of Werner Janssen, who is the first native-born American to conduct the Philharmonic Symphony orchestra. Back of the 34-year-old composer-conductor's triumph is an astounding narrative of hardships and endless fighting for recognition which would have defeated a far sturdier soul. Forced by his millionaire father to support himself because he wanted to study music, Janssen went hungry, lost sleep and suffered cold before he reached the top.

To the Victor Belong the Spoils

By IRVIN S. COBB

AN AMERICAN vaudeville actor had been playing on tour in Europe. On his return to America he was telling a group of his friends about the high lights of his first Continental appearance.

"It was in Hamburg," he said, "that I saw what I consider the most unique and interesting sight of my entire trip. In one of the better cafes the good people of Hamburg were holding the annual spring wine drinking contest.

"There were over a hundred contestants from all over the country gathered together to determine who could drink the most wine in a period of an hour.

"The prize finally went to a very little man who had succeeded in downing ten bottles of Rhine Wine in an hour."

"What was the prize?" asked one of the listeners.

"A bottle of Rhine Wine."

The Bahamas

Betty ready for a spin

Betty Carstairs, who twice attempted to wrest the Harnsworth motorboat racing trophy from America, has decided to abandon her native England to play the role of Queen Robinson Crusoe on an island she recently bought among the Bahamas. Tired of the world, and perhaps speedboats, Miss Carstairs doesn't think much of John Bull's high income taxes. Betty, the granddaughter of an oil millionaire, has indicated that she wants to live in a place where no tax collector can ferret her out.

Soprano and Baritone to Feature Combined Choir

When the united choirs of the four main Protestant churches of Washington C. H. come to Circleville for a vesper concert of sacred songs at the M. E. church, Sunday afternoon at four o'clock, Mrs. Lois H. Maurer, who possesses a high soprano voice of unusual sweetness, and M. C. Myers, rich baritone, will take the solo parts.

Miss Marian Christopher, assistant organist of Grace M. E. Church, of Washington C. H., will be the accompanist, and the two pianists will represent the First Baptist and Christian Church of that city. The pianists are Miss Elizabeth Godfrey and Miss Mildred Steffy.

Mr. Ralph Lloyd, director, was in this city a day or two ago making arrangements to accommodate the large chorus, which will probably stand throughout both groups of songs.

Ministers of the other churches and congregations of all churches not having services at four o'clock have been invited to participate in the services.

The concert to be given here is the same as presented in Washington C. H. to a capacity audience last Sunday night, under auspices of the Cecilia Music Club, which sponsors the big chorus.

A program having much to do with Halloween festivities was presented in chapel, Nov. 2. Room II, III, and IV were also present at the assembly.

A number of the pupils of High

EVERYBODY'S business just now seems to be adopting resolutions, disseminating information and writing to the newspapers in defense of one's particular vocation or avocation. The number of "defensive movements" would indicate a saturnalia of fault-finding from which few, if any, occupations or professions are escaping.

The "big butter and egg" men from the West were the first to revolt. By solemn resolution they publicly disclaimed credit for buying diamonds, automobiles and fur coats New York chorus girls are reputed to possess.

Then the models who "shoe-off"
the gowns in Fifth avenue shops organized to prove the fallacy of the universal belief that clothing models are jazz mad gold-diggers, whose chief aim in life is marrying a millionaire.

Even politicians have been telling the constituency, which "must be served," that they are not politicians at all, but high-minded, self-sacrificing statesmen consecrating their lives to the public service.

One by one the old, time-honored illusions are being shattered.
But this should not be cause for concern for an illusion-loving nation. The imagination of the few and the credulity of the many are cooperating in the manufacture of new illusions faster than the iconoclasts and unjustly accused can shatter old ones.

But sometimes you think it your integrity when it is only your vanity.

Will Rogers Picks
A Story For

By WILL ROGERS

SOMETIMES I think that police judges are the happiest guys in the world. All the time I am reading in the papers and hearing told here and there about the funny things that happen in police court.
Half the jokes seem to come from there. I guess it must be the jolliest place in town, and everybody there must have just one long snicker from the time they go to work till shutting-up time.

There was a guy brought in the other day, in a Detroit police coat for assault, and the judge stopped laughing at the last joke long enough to say:

"Is it true that you broke a bottle of Canadian beer over this man's head?"
"Well, no, your honor," says the prisoner, "that ain't strictly true, because I ain't that extravagant.
It was a Canadian beer bottle I broke on his nose!"

CAROLINE by RUTH DEWEY GROVES

SYNOPSIS

The depression did not alter life at "Hawthorn," the comfortable, hospitable home of the Philip Rutledges. Caroline, their lovely daughter, entertained lavishly and the younger set swarmed there.
Mrs. Rutledge spends most of her time abroad and her husband practically lives at the club. Following her mother's return from one of her trips, Caroline gives a party. The pampered Alva notes how capably her daughter has arranged everything and wishes she could feel happier about it. Caroline's parents disapprove of their daughter's france, Howard Dunsworth. Years ago, Howard's father bought property from Philip saying he wanted it for a leather factory and instead he went into the soap business in competition with Philip. The family have been enemies ever since.
At the height of the party, Philip arrives home with the news that Henry Dunsworth has ruined him.
Howard seems genuinely shocked.
Discussing the effect of the distressing news, Howard's father will line: "If we marry, my father will cut me off. I know you, it wouldn't please you any more to be poor than it would me." "Is that what you think of me?" Caroline flashes back. "Well, you are wrong.
I'd have been happy with you anywhere before you said that." With a scornful gesture, she hands him his engagement ring.

CHAPTER IV

Caroline sat in a heap on the sofa, too miserable and bewildered to go back to her mother and father, fighting off tears, thinking confusedly of what lay ahead of her. Life without Howard loomed as a terrifying ordeal. They had been ungenerous sweethearts for years.

Perhaps he would come back to her! Almost instantly she despised herself for the thought, but it persisted, bringing her a ray of comfort. He would know, when he'd time to think of what they'd done, that she couldn't have meant what she said.

And what if he wasn't all that she had imagined him? Just because she held exaggerated ideas of loyalty and love was no reason why Howard couldn't think more sanely of life.

It was no use—Howard had failed her. The thing to do was to keep her scorn for him and wipe out her love as soon as she could. But even as she told herself this she realized that she had never guessed any prospect could be so hopeless.

Howard possessed a trait, simply and completely that was the whole of the matter. She had to face it as it was.

Her mother came into the room, saying in a strained, unnatural voice: "Caroline, are you here?"
Caroline, with a jerk, dashed surreptitiously at her eyes with a wet handkerchief and smiled.
"How is Father?" she asked.

"He's gone upstairs to dress. Do you know what time it is?"
"Dress?" Caroline repeated vaguely.

"Of course. We are still people, aren't we?" Alva's usually soft voice was raspy. "Will you get into something for dinner? You're a crumpled mess."

Caroline laughed. The laugh broke "I suppose life will go on," she said and got to her feet. She looked at her mother, started to speak and quickly stifled the words.
She doubted if her mother knew what had happened to them no matter what her father had said after she left the library.

Caroline thought, too, that it would be somehow indicative to talk to the beautiful creature before her of money troubles. Alva was in a dull orange dinner gown, as medically gowned as ever.

"The daughter's heart lifted. Her mother was a roughie. Then she thought of Howard. After all, Alva hadn't yet been tried. She might be merely clinging to the things she knew. Caroline, with a charitable, went over and kissed her mother.

Alva did not seem to care for the caress, feeling it as a recognition of a condition she did not wish to acknowledge. They simply couldn't be so badly off, she thought, that they needed to go about kissing each other!

"Do stop sniffing," she begged.
"Are we to appear before the servants as ruins?"

Caroline fled. A bath, her loveliest dinner gown. They might help.
One needed something.

Dinner was as usual at Hawthorn House that night. Fat wax candles dripped lazily in the old silver candelabra on the lace-covered mahogany table. Crystal glasses sparkled as brightly as ever, the food was as good, the service not quite so perfect as Alva had hitherto required, but perfect enough to escape the notice of the three who sat at the board in a temporary truce with trouble.

The dinner went back to the kitchen barely touched. The cook eyed it in understanding silence but the waitress declared it was a shame the way they neglected good viands, especially that delicious lobster mousse cook had been at such pains to make for them.

"I guess they got their troubles," the cook remarked.
"Sure, but you'd never know it to listen to 'em. They ain't talking quite the same as usual but they ain't said a word about money since they sat down to the table."

"Where're they having their coffee?"
"In the drawing room same as always. Just as though nothing had happened."

"Well, keep your ears open. Maybe they'll talk freer in there and we can find out what's going to happen to us."

The girl gained nothing to report.
Mr. Rutledge retired early to her sitting room upstairs. Mr. Rutledge went up too. Caroline received a few friends who dropped in but departed early because, as they told her frankly, she was deadly dull.

Caroline made no attempt to hold them, as she had made no attempt to entertain them. She could think of nothing but Howard. Waiting to be called to the telephone, to hear him at the door.

At twelve, in a quiet house, she went to bed, and tried to read herself to sleep with a mystery story. Just before dawn she turned out her bed lamp and did not need to turn it on again.

She slept past the hour of her breakfast tray. When she awoke the tiny clock that once had raced the dressing table of Marie Antoinette startled her with the lateness of the morning.

Her mind was instantly cleared of sleep. She wondered if her father had left the house. She wanted to talk with him. She rang a summons, that indicated she wished prompt response. Yesterday a maid would have come quickly to her room when she rang like that.

She would start her own bath and dress while her breakfast was being prepared. But as she was about to message to her father, asking him
not to go until she had seen him.

Busy in the bath, running the tub, adding the bath crystals, she did not count the moments as they slipped by. But as she was about to message to her father, asking him
not to go until she had seen him.

There was a knock.
"Come in," she called.
"What's happened to Hilda?" she asked. "Where is she?"

"Hilda, my dear, has departed, with the cook and the waitress. The chauffeur and the outside men will go this afternoon. Also the laundress."

Caroline was a trifle stunned.
"But..." she began vaguely.
"I know," her father interrupted.
"You haven't breakfasted. Neither have your mother and Alva. They struggled not with a contraction she's never seen before—a drip not I believe it's called. I wonder if you could help her. Otherwise I'm afraid we'll be quite without coffee with our rolls."

"Funny," Caroline said mirthlessly, "but I've never made coffee.
One of the boys always did it when cook was away. If it were something with ice, I'd be sure to try. I had no idea a kitchen could be such a complicated affair—nothing but mysterious gadgets. At first we couldn't tell the stove from the icebox."

Caroline laughed. There was a heavy fear on her heart—but she laughed. "The kitchen was done over last year. It's entirely electric now. A model kitchen, in fact. One of our best magazines published pictures of it and cook had to refuse simply crowds of people admittance to see it. She said they made off with all the small electricals."

"I'll report to your mother that you're fully acquainted with it. Get down as soon as you can, will you?"
her father urged.

Caroline did not wait. She fastened the sash of her negligee and went down as she was. Her mother in the kitchen! If it weren't so tragic, it was too funny.

Alva was not so well groomed this morning. Her hair was disarranged, her face was flushed and—yes, it was tear-marked too. Her hands trembled and she presented a thoroughly pathetic picture as she struggled helplessly with an intricate glass and chromium coffee maker.

"Mother, the coffee isn't ground!"
Caroline exclaimed.
"Isn't it! Well, it's all the kind there is in this house. What do you suppose Norah did with it?"

"I should say she ground it," Caroline suggested. "There's something around here for that purpose.
Electric, of course."

"Do you think you can find it?"
Caroline went over to the counter where the electric mixer stood. "I think the attachments are in a drawer here," she said and began to search among the bewildering array of equipment there.

They couldn't, however, tell the coffee grinder from the food chopper, so they gave it up and went to have tea instead of coffee while Alva was struck with an idea that had its root in the past.

"We might crush the beans like ice," she said. "And we'll use a wooden mallet—never mind the electric jigger. This will be your job, Father. Here's a tea towel—taking from a drawer—"fold the beans inside it and pound them."

Mr. Rutledge pounded the beans, incidentally cracking a tile of the sink drain and popping a bean up into his eye when he wore a hole in the towel. Some of the beans remained whole, others were broken, a few were pulverized. The coffee was terrible.

They spooned their oranges, and Mrs. Rutledge preferred juice. She topped an egg and found the yolk entirely unappetizing. She pushed it aside and ate on a badly toasted roll. Mr. Rutledge contented himself with the orange and a sip or two of coffee. Caroline drank milk and put marmalade on her roll. Her mother warned her heartily against obesity.

At first they skirted the subject uppermost in their minds, but Alva Rutledge was too resentful against her former servants long to remain quiet about them.

"Walking on us like this!" she exclaimed indignantly. "What absurd notion do you suppose possessed them?"

"It wasn't an absurd notion, my dear," her husband assured her. "I came down last night and told them to clear out first thing in the morning."

"But Philip! How foolish. Just the same I think it was ungrateful of them to leave as they did. They probably imagined they wouldn't receive their wages."

"They knew they wouldn't," Philip corrected her. "I told them
I couldn't give them the customary notice. They offered to stay without pay until they found other places.
A great many servants are doing that I understand."

Alva's face drained white. "You asked them to leave me like this—with this house?"

Her husband's eyes wandered away from hers. "The house is no longer ours," he said miserably.

PATTERN 9039

You might search and search for a house frock to make than this, but it would be difficult to find. There are only six pieces to the whole pattern, and two of these are for the pockets and belt. The fact, however, that this design is simple does not lessen its chic. That long front panel gives a nice waiting effect, the half-belted waistline is very new, and the short sleeves cap the arms becomingly.
A pretty cotton plaid would be a nice choice for this house frock with bright colored buttons to set off the panel and pockets. When you have finished with it you'll be proud of the result!

Pattern 9039 may be ordered

The Symptoms

The young sufferer is pale, under-

In Banti's disease the spleen is moderately enlarged and firm. It continues to grow. There is usually a slight increase in the size of the liver as well. The sufferer begins to complain of faulty digestion, constipation and other intestinal disturbances. Jaundice may result from obstruction of the flow of bile.

The spleen is a purplish gland located in the abdomen on the left side of the body, just below the lower end of the stomach. It is believed to produce the red corpuscles found in the blood. It also manufactures the hemoglobin which gives the coloring to these cells. This work is also a function of the liver and if the spleen is diseased or unable to function properly, its work is taken over by the liver.

Removal of the Spleen

For many years little relief could be offered the young sufferer from Banti's disease. Within recent times successful results have been obtained by the removal of the spleen. In former years this surgical procedure was not resorted to, because it was thought that life could not exist without the spleen. It is now known that the spleen can be removed without apparent detrimental effects to the body.

"Splenectomy" or removal of the spleen is not so serious an operation as it would seem. It is of great benefit in some cases when performed in the early stages of Banti's disease.
When the disease is allowed to progress and the liver and other organs become involved, operation is of no avail.

Enlargement of the spleen occurs in disturbances other than Banti's disease. But enlargement of the spleen in children should arouse suspicion of this disease.

Every effort should be made to determine the underlying cause. Rickets, malaria, tuberculosis and other constitutional diseases are factors that must not be overlooked as among the possible causes of enlargement of the spleen.

All we need to stop dishonesty is a universal resolve to make it unprofitable.

A mere desire to do right isn't enough. Those who hanged witches had that.

est motion picture star, is teamed again with his deadly rival and feudist, W. C. Fields, Paramount's comedian in the latter's new picture, "The Old-Fashioned Way," now at the Cliftona Theatre.

"The Old-Fashioned Way" presents Fields as the manager and leading man of a hungry troupe of stock players, such as used to tour the provinces in the Gay 90's.

Ducking the sheriff and the frail hotel keeper in one town, they flee to the next where it is Fields' fortune to encounter the town's wealthiest widow, a fatuous lady with dramatic ambitions and a romantic urge.

Her baby son, played by Baby
LeRoy, takes a liking to Fields, and the widow finances the troupe on Fields' promise that she be permitted to act with them.

So, torn between love of money and his duty to his company, Fields manages to find a happy solution for his troubles, and even a happy ending for the romance of his daughter, played by Judith Allen.

Featured in the supporting cast are Joe Morrison, who rose to fame by his popularization of
"The Last Round-Up" in the

Today's Cross-Word Puzzle

Despite Levies, Fichter Says Solons Must Act

COLUMBUS, Nov. 9.—Ohio voters approved more than 500 special school levies on the ballots in Tuesday elections in approximately 775 school districts, Joseph W. Fichter, assistant director of the state education department, estimated on the basis of incomplete returns today.

However, according to Fichter's estimate, the proposed levies in about 250 districts failed. The schools in the latter case put their financial problems squarely on the shoulders of the coming special session of the legislature. Where levies failed in state aid school districts, the latter will be cut off from state aid January 1, unless the legislature revamps the school laws, Fichter said.

MAY BE CLOSED

In other districts where levies failed and where the schools do not receive state aid, schools may be forced to close at the first of the year "or soon after" because of lack of money unless the legislature enacts laws to help them, according to Fichter. The latter based his estimates on returns from more than 200 school districts. There, complete returns showed that 135 school levies passed and approximately 80 failed. However, Fichter said that a total of about only 250 would fail to approve the levies in his belief.

"The approval by the voters of the special levies," Fichter said, "was very encouraging. It shows that the public has not abandoned the school."

"This is particularly true when you stop to consider that many voters were hesitant to vote in favor of levies, feeling that the financing of schools should be the problem of the state legislature

The school levies approved will lend "subsistence rations" to the favored schools, he said, but will not definitely solve their problems. He pointed out that the schools in districts where levies were approved will be able to borrow in anticipation of funds from the levies after January 1 for needed operating expenses.

"However," Fichter declared, "it still remains for the legislature to work out a statewide program for relief of the schools. Until the legislature acts of course, we cannot definitely predict the fate of the future of our schools and the picture cannot be made clear until the general assembly does act."

Mrs. Thurn Gives Pointers On the Correct Diet for Child of School Age

Dear Friends in Circleville:

The work of research and experiment in child diets is one of the most interesting to dietitians and it is one which physicians and others specializing in diet will probably never abandon. The magazines are filled with articles about babies in Soviet Russia and in Italy, with articles on what Sweden does for its young children and with other enlightening articles on this work as carried out in many countries.

In our own country through organized groups, and through individuals working to the laudable end of making healthier children, minimizing child diseases and child deaths, The U. S. Department of Agriculture at Washington issues bulletins, free for the asking on food for children and on other subjects related to the diet and health of children. Send for these if you have unusual problems with your young family, and if the local school is making no effort to educate mothers on the home care of and feeding of children.

Meanwhile remember that the food the child eats makes a difference in his growth and development and in his fitness for life.

Be sure that his diet includes all the materials necessary for good bones, sound teeth and energy to play and study.

Here are some menus for dinners which will serve as family meals, and yet which are especially designed for the child of school age. Give a glass of milk an hour before each meal.

Salad for Luncheon or Supper

To make the carrot and cabbage salad use: one package lemon gelatin; one pint warm water, two tablespoons vinegar; one teaspoon salt, one cup raw carrots, grated; one cup cabbage, shredded. Dissolve the gelatin in warm water, add vinegar and salt, chill. When slightly thickened, fold in the carrots and cabbage. Turn into individual molds. Chill until firm. Unmold on crisp lettuce. Garnish with mayonnaise, and cheese balls. Roll the balls in grape-nuts, or ground peanuts.

Sealed Train Windows
There will be no disputes about opening windows in the railway carriages of the future, for they will be sealed, according to the Canadian National Railways Magazine. Instead, the air in trains will be filtered, washed, continuously renewed, and maintained at an even temperature. Carriages will be dustless and almost noiseless.

TOOK PILLS FOR 30 YEARS, THEN CEREAL BROUGHT RELIEF

Mr. Forsythe Endorses ALL-BRAN for Constipation

If you suffer from headaches, loss of appetite and energy or any other of the frequent effects of constipation, read this voluntary letter:

"After taking pills and tablets for about thirty years for constipation, I started to take your ALL-BRAN three times a day according to directions. Today I can eat cheese, and that is binding, and certainly feel fine."—Mr. Ed. Forsythe, Box 219, Youngstown, N. Y.

Science says ALL-BRAN provides "bulk" to exercise the intestines, and vitamin B to further aid regular habits. In addition, ALL-BRAN is rich in blood-building iron.

The "bulk" in ALL-BRAN is much like that of leafy vegetables. Inside the body, it forms a soft mass which gently clears the intestines of wastes.

Isn't this pleasant "cereal way" far more healthful than using patent medicines—so often habit-forming?

Just eat two tablespoonfuls daily. In serious cases use with each meal. If not relieved this way, see your doctor.

PURINA MILLS Circleville, Ohio

Hua, of Starling Family
The hua is a bird allied to the starling, confined to a small region in the mountains of New Zealand. The name "hua" is the native Maori name and is probably indicative of its note. The bird is peculiar in the sexual differentiation of the beak. The males have a short, stout and straight beak, while that of the female is long, slender and curved. The black, white-tipped tail feathers were formerly much prized by the Maori chiefs and worn as insignia of rank.

PLenty OF THRILLS IN CHICAGO BATTLE

COLUMBUS, Nov. 9.—Gridiron fans who like football games to be full of thrills and excitement will find the Chicago game a great afternoon Saturday at this stadium when the Chicago Maroons and the Ohio Buckeyes meet in a battle of the new relations after a lapse since 1927.

This contest will bring together two great offensive machines, exponents of the open style of play and coached by men who believe in a varied and versatile attack. Although the straight end sweeps and line smashes will not be neglected, it will be a battle of forward passes, laterals, forward laterals, lateral forwards, double reverses, and other tricks that will cause the spectators to gasp.

Ruth Hits Pair, Pleasing Japs

SENDAI, Japan, Nov. 9.—Forty thousand freezing spectators flocked with enthusiasm when Babe Ruth knocked out his first home run of his Japanese tour today, and then the crowd went stark, screaming mad with joy when he hit another homer in the same game.

Never before in his long career that ended this season had Ruth seen a demonstration like the Sendai fans produced when the Babe obliged with the home runs that Tokyo and Hakodate had yelled for in vain.

The Americans won, 7 to 0, in a game that, to the Japanese, was the best yet played here. They had enough home runs to talk about for the rest of their lives. Besides Ruth's two, Jimmy Foxx, Charley Gehring, and Bing Miller each smashed homers.

Connie Mack, who is managing the Americans, again was surprised at the smooth playing of the Japanese, whom he rates on a par with American AA leagues.

Reports from Tokyo said that the big stadium had again been sold out for the remaining two games there, although seats commanded high premiums after Ruth's two homers.

RRR gives comforting warmth Externally and Internally

Here is a conflict that has all the makings of a wide open free-for-all scoring affair in which the tide of battle is likely to shift backward and forward. There will be plenty of "spring" moments for the followers of both teams.

Coch Clark Shaughnessy of the Maroons has built his attack around Jay Berwanger, a robust 185-pound halfback, and this is the Iowa blacksmith. It is the Buckeye defenders' task all afternoon trying to stop his running, passing, punting, and receiving. His efforts are aided and abetted by excellent blocking by his teammates.

Not Bartlett, of Cleveland, Ohio, is Berwanger's help mate, and this pair has been named the "Easy Peas" by Chicago sports writers.

But Berwanger and Co. will not have everything their own way Saturday.

Ohio State boasts a line almost as sturdy as that of the Maroons and a back just as versatile as Berwanger. He is Dick Heekin, Ohio's candidate for all-American honors. Heekin does everything that Berwanger does and static this so far this season proves that he does it just a little better than his Maroon rival.

SPRINTED 92 YARDS
For example, Heekin broke all existing speed records at Western Reserve last Saturday when he ran a kickoff back 92 yards for a touch down. Timers in the game say that it was exactly 15 seconds from the time the ball had been kicked until Heekin had crossed the goal line.

Coch Schmidt again will be handicapped with injuries for this game. Trevor Rice, regular left end, and Jack Smith, regular right halfback, will be on the bench nursing injuries.

Bowling News

Container Corporation registers took possession of the Circleville recreation alleys Thursday evening for their weekly joust. On the basis of scores, not counting handicaps, the office won a pair from the powers and the papermakers won three in a row from the maintainers. The C. The scores:
Office—Norris, 509; Eagleson, 415; McClure, 357; Hawks, 317; Herdick, 463; total 2061.
Power—Gall, 365; Gentzel, 329; Reckert, 291; Schnee, 405; Ekins, 563; total 1953.

Papermakers—Thomas, 439; Watson, 453; Mills, 370; Sharpe, 358; Vanatta, 470; total 2090.
Maintainers—Goodman, 327; Farnley, 425; Morehouse, 321; Gaiseman, 302; Quince, 305; total, 1680.

IOWA CITY, Ia., Nov. 9.—Indications today were that the University of Iowa football squad will be in the worst physical shape of the season when the Hawkeyes clash with Purdue tomorrow. Three regulars, Dwight Hoover, and George Teyro, halfbacks, and Ben Pige, end, will be definitely out. Jerry Foster, tackle, and Jack Shea, reserve center, are ill.

Kentucky's customary election tallings have taken place in Pennsylvania this year.

BOULETTS TO BANQUET

We can Nov. 20. A banquet for last year's city ten pin league will be held at 8:30 p. m. All reservations are to be made with Warren Baker before Nov. 12.

Here's an interesting sports yarn written by Stratton of the Wilmington News Journal.

"TIPPY DYE is blazing a trail on Big Ten grounds which leave opponents wondering what his mighty mite who is only a sophomore will be doing with that pigskin before he graduates. Playing his first year as a regular Buckeye quarterback he has proved a field general who can match wits with the best in the Western Conference and is in addition a good passer and broken field runner.

"Tippy Dye" is the expression that will upset Jimmy Hull quicker than any other. The feud between these two grid and basketball stars started in the season of 1932 when Pomeroy played Greenfield in the Southeastern Ohio sectional cage tournament. Hull had been one of the scoring aces of the tourney and was figured to continue his rampage at the expense of Dye when they tangled on the hardwood, but he had failed to take into consideration the fact that Dye was destined to be rated as one of the best guards in the state that year.

"Agile and tricky the Pomeroy star held Hull scoreless from the field, the only points the McClain ace registered were from the free throw line which he took twice and each time found the net.

"This was a heartbreaking game for Hull, but the exceptional play of Dye throughout the initiating of a sports character into statewide prominence. Dye is now blazing his name across the sports pages of the nation's leading papers as a griddle who has overcome a great weight disadvantage to gain a regular berth on the Ohio State eleven and continues to out-smart opponents both in directing play and doing his share of ball carrying."

MATTHEWS' CAPTAIN

DELAWARE, Nov. 9.—Johnny Matthews of Ashland, O., varsity player on the Ohio Wesleyan eleven, will captain the Battling Bishops when they meet Denison University here Saturday.

Matthews was made captain for the day by Coach George Gauthier. George Wertz, veteran halfback who has been unable to play most of the season on account of injuries, may replace Paul Sell in the starting line up Saturday. Coach Gauthier is hoping to have Sell ready for the clash with Cincinnati next week.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Nov. 9.—Art Clarkson's return to condition for tomorrow's game between Minnesota and Indiana promised a powerful passing attack in the offensive of the undefeated Gophers. Julie Alfonso, not quite so versatile, is expected to give way to right halfback in favor of Clarkson.

Armistice Program On Radio Sunday

There will be a special Armistice Day program broadcast over the NBC stations at 6:30 p. m. Sunday. This program may be heard over stations WLW or WTAM.

"Gable? He Won't Get a Hit With Us in There"

The Dean boys—Duffy and Dizzy—who were largely responsible for the fact that the St. Louis Cardinals won the world series, have entered the movies. The star pitchers are shown at a baseball field in Brooklyn with Sam Sax, of a movie company, and William De Witt, right, treasurer of the Cardinals, while making a motion picture "short". So, watch out Clark Gable!

Frick Selection New Peace Move

NEW YORK, Nov. 9.—The election of Ford Frick as president of the National league was seen today as a handshake between baseball and the press.

The boyish-appearing Frick—he isn't 40 until Dec. 19—has promised close co-operation between himself as president of the league and his former co-workers, the sports writers of the country.

There have been times in the past when many a sports writer had hesitated to sink a type, when the baseball people could cheerfully have crowned the sports writer with a bat.

MAY CONVERT TERRY
Frick's election will go far toward erasing any friction and the friendly Frick may even have Bill Terry and the sports writers singing together over their stints.

And that, my friends, will be an event worthy of the history books when and if it happens.

Still, I wouldn't gamble that Ford can't turn the trick. Like other famous Hoosiers before him—George Ade, James Whitcomb Riley, George Barr McCutcheon, Lew Wallace and Meredith Nicholson—Ford has a way of getting things done.

Tall, slender and dark, he has a friendly grin and a friendlier word for everybody.

Think of what he has accomplished in his 39 years. Born at Wawaka, Ind. (and don't bother hunting that one on a map because you probably won't find it) in 1894, he was graduated from De Pauw university in 1915. Like most other Hoosiers he immediately grabbed a typewriter and went to work on the papers.

In 1921 we find him on a paper in Colorado Springs and covering the Pueblo flood so well that he attracted the attention of Arthur Brisbane, No. 1 man of the newspaper world, who brought Ford to New York as a sports writer.

Ford took up sports broadcasting as a sideline and his friendly Hoosier voice at once made a hit with the radio fans. Incidentally, between his writing and broadcasting, Ford's annual stipend climbed above the $50,000 a year mark, which wasn't considered chicken feed even before the depression.

"HOWDY FOLKS"
I can't describe him for you better than his own warm greeting of the radio—"Howdy folks." That's just what he is—a howdy folks sort of person—friendly, agreeable and smart. He knows all the answers in baseball and he'll smooth over many a rough spot between baseball and the scribes. He knows the problems on both sides.

FORD FRICK.

ident Charles Curtis did hold a ticket in his own name. Asked whether his fling on the Irish sweetstakes was a secret, Charles replied:

"Hell no! Everyone knows I play the ponies."

New Department

Several of the President's influential advisers seriously envision establishment of a new department of the Government by the 1935 Congress.

The plan has been broached to Roosevelt, and was discussed at one Cabinet meeting.

The new agency would be known as the Department of Public Welfare, would be headed by a full-fledged Cabinet member.

Into it would be thrown a number of established bureaus and services, plus several new ones to be created next year. The bureaus are:

Bureau of Education now under Interior Department.
Public Health Service now under the Treasury.

Children's Bureau now under the Labor Department.
Women's Bureau also under Labor.

Banking the Last Shot

By IRVIN S. COBB

THE two following Scotch stories are in the same vein and therefore are paired here to show the many stories that probably had the same original tale as a parent.

The first version has to do with the great Scotch boy who was given a dollar by an American friend of the family. "Son," said this friend, "tell me what you expect to do with this money."

"Well," said the boy, "I will take it to one bank and have it changed to dimes; then I'll take it to another bank and have the dimes changed to nickels; then I'll go to still another bank and have the nickels changed to pennies."

"Why go to all that bother?" asked the friend.

"Well, someone might make a mistake."

The other version is that a Scot was cashing a fifty dollar check at a bank. He asked that he be given one dollar bill and when he received the notes, he started counting them very carefully, stopping when he reached the forty-ninth.

"Why don't you count the fiftieth?" inquired the attendant.

"Aha," answered the Scot, "there might be two there."

Republicans and Democrats have no monopoly on Coolidges in Massachusetts. In the recent election one Albert Coolidge ran for state office on the Socialist ticket.

Clarence M. Wooley, Chairman of the American Radiator and Standard Sanitary Corporation, operating one of the best economic and statistical bureaus in the country, reported that since August 10 heavy industries have experienced a steady improvement in business. His own company, he said, has done 40 per cent more business than during the corresponding period in 1933.

Troops Increase Saar Tension

Geoffrey Knox, League of Nations Commissioner in Saar

A Saar pre-election crowd

Reports that France is moving troops to the Saar border for use in an emergency reveal the tenor held for the outcome of the plebiscite, Jan. 13, when 800,000 Saar residents decide whether they prefer France, Germany or the League of Nations to rule them. According to the Versailles Treaty in 1919, the Saar's coal mines were to be used by France as a war reparation, but Reichsführer Adolf Hitler, since his ascension to power, has demanded return of the Saar to Germany. Remembering the fate of their compatriots in Germany, Catholics, Communists, Socialists, Jews and pacifists are opposing Saar Nazis at the ballot boxes, and should Germany's Nazis attempt to capture the Saar by a putsch, it is indicated that French troops will be ready to march in.

Will Rogers Pic: A Story For This Spot

By WILL ROGERS

RACE track bets are forever. Big people who seem to have their money made in good times, then what horse is just bound to win the next race. They are worse than politicians, they will volunteer to give you the exact inside information on anything, for a consideration.

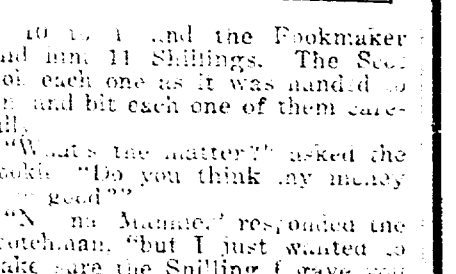

Well, once there were two touts and they were in a Scotchman's bar on a race day. The Scotchman had a horse in mind and he didn't want to do it, but finally decided a Shilling. The horse won.

As to the 1 and the Bookmaker paid him 1 Shilling. The Scotchman took each one as it was handed to him, and bit each one of them clean full.

"What's the matter?" asked the Bookie. "Do you think my money is good?"

"No," the Scotchman responded. "I'm a Scotchman, but I just wanted to make sure the Shilling I gave you wasn't among the bad."

Hold Ham and Iron Fair

Each year in France great numbers of sturdy Norman peasants travel to Paris to attend the annual ham and iron fair. Although Normandy has no separate political existence, it was for centuries in an extent times a territory over which both France and England fought many bitter and bloody battles. Normandy, which lies opposite England on the English channel, was united with England from 1103 to 1204, when France regained possession. In 1793, when the French departments were created, Normandy became one with other political divisions of France—Chicago Tribune.

RFC LEADER SEES CLIMB

WASHINGTON, Nov. 9. Better business was sighted today by Chairman Jesse H. Jones of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation with the passing of election uncertainty and campaign bitterness.

The Roosevelt administration, he emphasized, is ready to restore normal business conditions.

"We ought not to disregard the fact that we cannot start business in high speed," Jones told International News Service.

"But business ought to quit holding back, and go forward with confidence. My own belief is that business will pick up, with acceptance of Tuesday's verdict by business and industry as an unqualified approval of the president's program and policies."

SPARKS CRIES FOR CHANGES IN PARTY

COLUMBUS, Nov. 9.—The sonorous voice of C. Nelson Sparks, former mayor of Akron, was added today to the loud cry for complete liberalization and reorganization of the tottering Republican party in Ohio.

Sparks, who supported his party's gubernatorial nominee, Clarence J. Brown, after being defeated by Brown in the Republican primary, again cast off the moorings that held his bark in line with the G. O. P. organization only for the duration of the Fall campaign.

Politics Breaks Gloria's Romance

Testimony that politics helped to break up her romance with Michael Farmer, Irish sportsman, was presented in behalf of Gloria Swanson, film actress, when she was granted an interlocutory divorce decree from her fourth husband in Los Angeles. Miss Lois Wilson, actress-friend of Miss Swanson, testified that Farmer once became abusive of his wife when she sought to discuss a radio talk of President Roosevelt, telling her that "she didn't know anything about politics". This photo shows the couple in a happier day.

ership of the Republican party in Ohio," he declared, "should be thrown out bag and baggage and a wholesome and decent citizenship of constructive liberalism should take hold of the party wreckage and rebuild it, beginning today—not tomorrow."

Result of Tuesday's election which witnessed the overwhelming defeat of Brown for governor and of the veteran old guard Republican, Sen. Simon D. Fess, who sought re-election, was not surprising to Sparks.

"It was not surprising to anyone in Ohio," he said, "except to those alleged Republican state leaders and their kind who have been dreaming false dreams for the past three months of a return to the old system of special privilege through lobby control."

Sparks prefaced his remarks with a statement that he is not now and does not intend to be a candidate for governor in 1936, but he said he believed the result of Tuesday's election "calls for an honest expression" from men who have been active in the Republican party.

"Thousands of sincere and earnest Republicans," he continued, "are today convinced that the many thousands of other Republicans who did not support either the state or national Republican ticket believe that the old reactionary leaders of our party have utterly failed to recognize the urgent need for a new party social vision."
